Byrnes Urges Quick Action On Contract Termination

Asks Bill Before Recess, Speed on Other Measures For Reconversion

By Ben W. Gilbert

Testifying that contract termination work was "limping" along in the absence of specific legislation, War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes yesterday asked Congress to enact the Murray-George bill before convention recess and to move ahead as rapidly as possible on other phases of reconversion.

Admitting that the Navy Department bungled the cancellation of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. contracts by failing to give advance notice to the company's 9000 employes at Long Island City, N. Y., Byrnes insisted that it represented an exceptional case and praised the armed services for doing a "great job" of planning.

Appearing before the war contracts subcommittee of the Senate Military Affairs Committee Byrnes acknowledged that he subsequently ordered all future cutbacks cleared with the Production Executive Committee of the War Production Board in advance.

(This ruling, substantially increasing the War Production Board's authority over cutbacks, will be administered by the newly created reconversion staff of the Production Executive Committee.

Work for Millions More

Earlier the Senate's special postwar committee estimated that industry must employ 8 to 10 millions more people after victory than ever have been employed before in peacetime.

The report estimated that 2.5 million men will be released from the ground forces during the year following Germany's defeat at the rate of 200,000 to 250,000 a month, while after final victory the armed forces will be demobilized at a rate of 500,000 to 600,000 a month. It recommended a 16-point action program for Congress, many parts of which Byrnes indorsed in his testimony.

Highlights of Byrnes' testimony and other developments included:

1. Byrnes said that "war taxation should end with the end of the war," and called upon Congress to begin work on a postwar revenue bill, so that shortly after X-day capital can be encouraged to invest in industry.

2. Provision for reconversion unemployment compensation of at least $20 a week for 26 weeks a year for a period of two years, with the Federal government insuring the State systems against

750 Yanks Died Attacking Small Section of Beach

Near Grandcamples-Bains, June 10 (U.P.).—Hundreds of American assault troops lost their lives in gaining a mile and a half of beach on a sector east of here in the Cherourg Peninsula landing.

An Army major said today he estimated some 750 bodies were recovered on the sandy beaches here. Probably an equal number were washed away by a succeeding high tide.

GOP Plea Offers Hope For OPA Bill

By Robert C. Albright

A "hold the price line" appeal to House Republicans from one of the leading GOP critics of OPA administration yesterday pointed to the first hope of salvaging the amendment-studded price-control extension bill from a veto.

Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.), ranking minority member of the House Banking Committee, unexpectedly took the floor as Democratic leaders battled a series of price-lifting amendments almost certain, if adopted, to collide with the White House.

Wolcott's speech, pointed at the Bankhead-Brown amendment, already approved by the Senate, tying textile ceilings to a parity price for raw cotton, and a series of House concessions on other products. He told the House GOP:

"If you break through that price line you start a spiral. Whether you start it with cotton goods,

Texans Reject Pro-Roosevelt Elector Slate

Convention Ties Nominee Support To Two-Thirds Rule

By the Associated Press

The Texas Democratic executive committee, meeting yesterday at Dallas, voted, 37 to 6, against certifying a slate of pro-Roosevelt presidential electors for printing on the July primary ballot.

The slate was davanced by a faction that broke away from the party's State convention after being twice outcoted by anti-Administration elements.

The convention then went ahead and named its own group of 23 electors and instructed them not to support the party's presidential nominee unless the two-thirds nominating rule is restored at the national convention nad other conditions are met.

Perfectly Reglar, Butler Says

Chairman George Butler of the executive committee, contended this grop of electors was selected by a "perfectly regular convention," and unless yesterday's action is upset in the courst it will be the only slate papearing on the July 22 Democratic primary ballots.

The committee also rejected a request by the pro-Roosevelt grop that the voters be permitted to settle the question of whether electors shold be bound to support the party's presidential nominee.

Aware that the defection of a single State's electoral vote easily could be the deciding factor in a close election, the Roosevelt supporters planned a quick appeal to the courts.

To Present Bricker

Former Gov. James V. Allred, a leader of the pro-Roosevelt faction, declared:

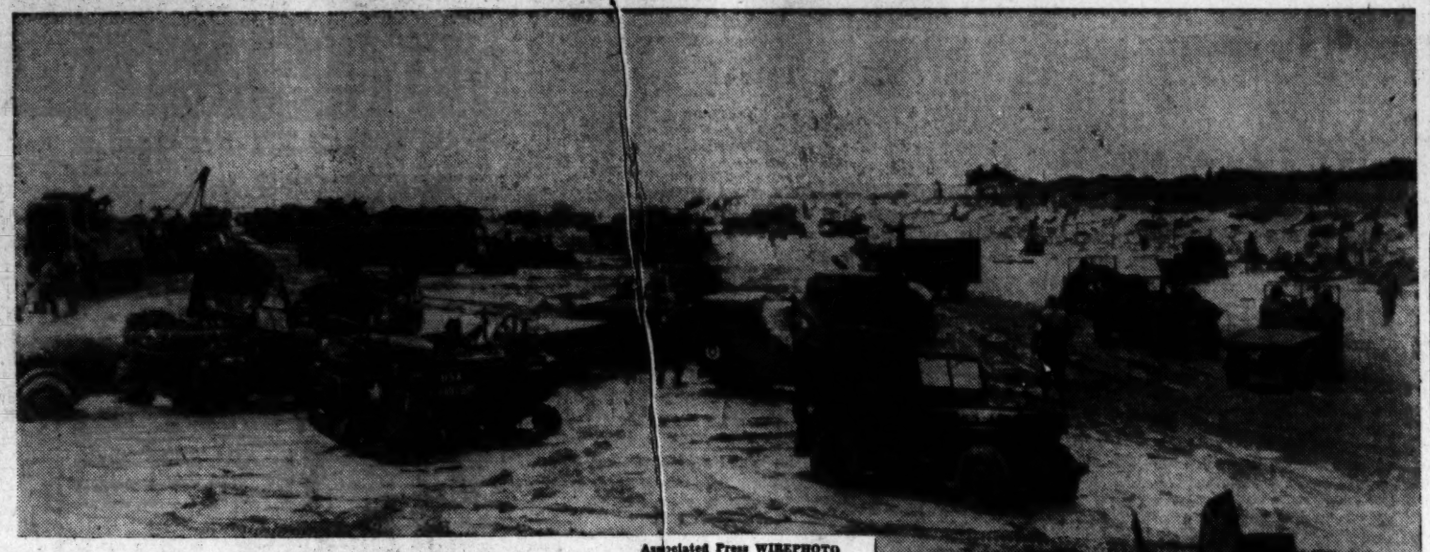

"The uninstructed convention actually voted to instruct its electors to bolt if the national convention did not follow its wishes. If that is democracy, I do not know what democracy it."

Other developments on the political front:

Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio announced that the speech placing him in nomination for President at

50,000 Spread Bond Appeal In District

News of Assault by 29th Division Spurs Sales as Drive Opens

Civilian D-Day yesterday opened the Fifth War Loan drive locally with more than 50,000 volunteers urgnig District residents to back up their fighting men with bonds.

The 107-million-dollar District share of the 16-billion-dollar national goal can be reached, they reminded buyers, only if each resident invests $100 in bonds. Of the local goal 61 million dollars, almost 60 per cent, mut be raised through individual sales and of that sum 34 million dollars has been earmarked by the Treasury for Series E bonds.

News that the Twenty-ninth Division, which is composed primarily of men from the Washington area, was slasing across the Cherbourg Peninsula in a drive for the Cherbourg port spurred sales throughout the city.

Bond salesmen and bupers alike had the assurance of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander in the European theater, that the fighting men were looking to the people at home to support them in their drive.

People Invariably Rally

"In moments of crisis involving the safety of our native land," Eisenhower said, "the American people have invariably rallied against the danger with courage, faith and resolution. For more than two years who have been in one of these crises, perhaps the greatest in our history. On the battlefield and on the home front men and women are daily making great sacrifices so that freedom and our way of life may be preserved.

"There is now in progress the Fifth War Loan drive to raise money so as to insure that this conflict will be brought to the speediest possible conclusion and with the least loss of life. The complete success in that drive will meet the acclaim of the fonces in the field and will be renewed proof that Americans are one solid phalanx of determination in this great

Sweep in Italy Cuts 14th Nazi Army to Bits

Rome, June 12 (AP).—The German Fourteenth army has been "dispersed to the four winds," Allied headquarters declared today as Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's forces, pursuing the disorganized Germans up the Italian west coast, approached Orbetello, 71 miles northwest of Rome.

As depleted enemy units fell back on Florence with the greater part of their equipment lost, the Nazi high command faced the immediate necessity of sending heavy reinforcements from France or elsewhere in Europe if any real attempt was to be made to hold northern Italy.

Situation "Wholly Chaotic"

"It is now quite clear," the Allied announcement said, "that the original Fourteenth army . . . has been dispersed to the four winds. All that remains is a few scattered remnants who mainly are engaged in stealing one another's transport to get away as fast as possible. Prisoners describe the situation as wholly chaotic."

The German commander, Field Marshal Albert Kesselring, has brought in three fresh infantry divisions in an effort to slow the Allied advance.

Push Through Road Junction

Across the breadth of Italy the Allied Fifth and Eighth Armies pressed grimly forward, meeting organized resistance only where the Nazis badly needed time to extricate their troops. The countryside was littered with abandoned enemy equipment.

Fifth Army troops pushed through the important road junc-

Reds Menace Viipuri; Take Finnish Towns

Storm Breaches in Mannerheim Line For Strong Gains

London, June 12 (AP).—Russian armor and troops poured through breaches in the Mannerheim Line today and seized Raivola in an 8-mile advance that carried them to within 40 miles of Viipuri, Finnish port city second only to Helinki.

The Russians also overran Kivennapa, 10 miles northeast of Raivola, which is 8 miles beyond the coastal strong point of Terijoki, captured yesterday. More than 30 other populated places were taken as the Russians swept up along the western side of the Karelian Isthmus.

Russian artillery, bombs and guns of the Baltic fleet cracked the defenses along a 25-mile front and stunned the Finns wit ha cannonading which echoed through Leningrad, more than 25 miles away.

Dispatches from Moscow said Finnish casualties, heavy from the start, were increasing. The Finns were reported dazed by the suddenness and weight of the attack.

A German spokesman declared the Karelian drive could not be considered the start of the Russian summer offensive against Germany and that the Red army had so far used only "several division."

A DNB commentator said reconnaissance showed the Russians had massed the bulk of their forces on the lower Dnestr for an offensive whose start would be determined by the weather. He said other drives were being prepared in the center and war to the north around Lake Peipus.

Valiant Subchaser Lost

18 More Jap Vessels Are Sent To Bottom by U. S. Submarines

By George Connery

Sinking of 18 additional Japanese vessels by American submarines—the largest toll announced in any one communique—was disclosed yesterday by the Navy.

At the same time it was announced that in the Mediterranean, the U. S. subchaser PC-558, destroyed two enemy one-man submarines but was lost in a subsequent action on May 9. Lieut. (j.g.) Edward C. Leber, USNR, her commander, was wounded. His wife, Mrs. Bartlett Requardt Leber, lives in Baltimore.

The Navy did not reveal the extent of loss of life aboard the PC-558, but said that "the next of kin of casualties have been notified." Such vessels usually carry about 60 men.

Jap ships sunk by our submarines were one large tanker, one medium transport, six medium cargo transports, six medium cargo vessels and four small cargo vessels.

These brought the total of Japanese vessels bagged by the growing fleet of American submarines to 607, and put the average of recent sinkings in the Pacific at two-a-day.

Since the start of the war two of our submarines have been announced as lost, 20 as overdue and presumed lost and one as destroyed to prevent capture. The last was the Scorpion, reported overdue and presumed lost March 22.

While the Subchaser PC-558 was on patrol off the coast of Italy, her lookout reported a small wake, at first believed to be a periscope or a circling torpedo traveling in a slow circle.

When the subchaser closed in, it could be seen that the wake was caused by what appeared to be a glass dome, about 2 feet in diameter, extending 8 to 10 inches above the surface. A smaller wake, 10 feet astern of the dame, appeared to be from a propeller.

Fire from 20 and 40 mm. guns and depth charges finished off the sub. Later, a similar target was observed by the PC-558, and another PC patroling in the area joined int he attack. The midget U-boat disappeared after several shots penetrated the glass dome.

Recently a one-man German submarine, that gave the appearance of one torpedo mounted stop another, floated ashore on the Anzio beachhead in Italy. The lower section was a torpedo, the upper a diving chamber for the operator.

Confidentially Speaking

Intercepted Mail 'Open Book' To Hundreds, Probers Learn

By Mary Spargo

Four United States Senators, a committee clerk, an official reporter and a dozen newspaper correspondents listened to hours of testimony yesterday in an effort to discover what "key officials" of the State Department handle confidential copies of censored mail.

After three hours the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads learned:

1. Hundreds of persons in the State Department, excluding only, in certain departments, office boys and charwomen, have access to intercepts of censored mail.

2. From department to department these confidential intercepts move in sealed envelopes marked "confidential." If they are not retained for the State Department's confidential files, they are put in an envelope marked "confidential" and ordered burned.

3. Before they are burned they are all reday by a $1650 per annum Negro file clerk, in sole charge of destroying not only intercepts but decoded State Department telegrams from all over the world.

4. After the clerk has glanced over the material to be burned, an armed guard meets him at the gate of his room, and escorts him and the truckload of papers down to the incinerator in the vastness of the State Department cellars.

5. Once in the cellar, the furnace man shovels the confidential papers into the incinerator while

18-Mile Push Inland Made By Battling U. S. Troops

Whole Shore Line Firmly Held and Being Deepened, Leaders Report

Allied Supreme Headquarters, London (Tuesday), June 13 (UP).—Allied mobile patrols have driven to the approaches of Cherbourg, it was announced today.

Cherbourg now is well within range of American "Long-Tom" artillery. Allied warships already were blasting German positions around the port.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force (Tuesday) June 13 (AP).—American tanks and infantry smashed through the center of the German line in Normandy yesterday, capturing the Cerisy Forest, 18 miles inland from the sea, toppling the stronghold of Carentan after a bitter fight, and battling Nazi forces only 14 miles from Cherbourg.

Headquarters said Field Marshal Gen. Erwin Rommel was using from 14 to 15 divisions, 250,000 German troops, against the Allied forces, but communique No. 14 declared:

"The fusion of our beachheads is now complete and a coastal strip some 60 miles long is firmly in our hands. Its depth is being increased steadily."

A later official statement also said: "The enemy has been unable to build up his attacking forces as rapidly as anticipated."

10,000 Germans Captured

At the end of the first week of invasion fighting the Allies have taken more than 10,000 prisoners.

The seizure of Cerisy Forest put American troops near the mid-Normandy communications hub of St. Lo, and was the deepest inland penetration yet scored by the Allies.

(This action probably was spearheaded by the highly praised Twenty-ninth American Division, made up basically of men from the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, since at last reports they had driven to the edge of the forest.)

Slight advances were made east of Caen on the British-Canadian sector on the American left flank, headquarters said, and "American troops in the Cherbourg peninsula have made further progress to the north and west" in their effort to seal off an 800-square-mile area including the port of Cherbourg.

Leaders Visit Front

Fierce fighting between British and enemy armored units continued between Tilly-Sur-Seulles, which changed hands several times, and Caen, east of the Cerisy Forest.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme Allied invasion commander, made a five-hour inspection tour of the American sector yesterday, accompanied by Gen.

Nazis Not a Coastal Division

Beach Won After Yanks Hung By Eyelids, Montgomery Says

With Allied trops in France, June 11 (delayed).—Gen Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, outspokenly pleased with the feats of American troops, said today the "beach where the landing of the Americans took place east of the Carentan Estuary was found being defended by a German division which was ont a coastal division. It was a very good division and fought very well. German prisoners said the division had just been brought up from behind to thicken the crust of the coastal defenses and it actually was in the process of carrying out exercises when the Americans attacked.

"There was very heavy fighting on that American beach all D-Day, swaying back and forth, and by the end of the day the American were not more than 100 yards inland and were hanging on by their eyelids.

'Very Unpleasant, Tricky'

"You can imagine American doing that. It was very unpleasant, very tricky. There is no doubt about it that the American troops did absolutely magnificiently in recovering from that very unpleasant situation, and today these same trops are miles inland—very good, very good indeed."

Montgomery said the situation was retrieved by three things:

"First, by the gallantry of the American soldier who is a very brave man.

"Second, by the grand supporting fire given from the sea and by the Allied Navy.

"And third, by the support given from the air by the fighter-bombers who came down low to sheet up Germans at close range.

Violent Assault Launched

"The retrieving of that situation is probably one of the finest things done in this operation—very fine, vern fine indeed. Wonderful!

"The violence, power and speed of our initial assault carried us over the beaches and inland very quickly.

"That was my initial instruction to the senior officers. I said that every man must be imbued with one idea—to penetrate quickly and deeply into enemy country and peg out claims inland. And that was done.

"The conception that you land on the beaches and get a little bridgehead and then dig in—that is no good. You must penetrate quickly and deeply.

"Our soldiers, American and British, are in tremendous form. Their tails are very high up in the air. They are full of beans. And they have already got the measure of the enemy."

Rome, June 12 (AP).—President Roosevelt, in a telegram of congratulation to Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, said that "the Fifth Army made the American people very happy."

Clary replied:

"All members of the Fifth Army deeply appreciate your message of congratulation. It is an inspiration to us all. We reaffirm our pledge of unrelenting blows against the enemy until his final defeat."

Big U. S. Carrier Fleet Pounds Jap Marianas Bases for 2d Day

The powerful American carrier task force operating in Japan's Marianas Islands has carried its operations against the enemy there into the second day, a Pacific fleet announcement disclosed yesterday.

The Navy reported that carrier aircraft struck Guam, Tinian, Saipan and Rota Sunday.

This followed an earlier announcement of a carrier-borne aircraft attack on the first three islands Saturday.

Guam, at the extreme southern tip of the Marianas group, was the former United States naval base captured by the Japanese within a week after the start of the war.

The latest fleet announcement also reported air attacks on the Truk stoll and other islands, indicating widespread activity throughout the southwest Pacific.

At Truk the air fields on on Param, Eten, Dublon and Moen Islands were principal targets. Several fires were started.

Seventh Army Air Force Liberators hit, Ponape Town, and gun positions on Jonape Island.

"Ventura search planes of fleet airwing 2 bombed Ocean Island and two of the planes continued to Nauru Island to strafe small craft.

In the next day, Mitchells of the Seventh Army Air Force bombed Nauru and started fires visible 20 miles.

"Eenemy positions in the Marshalls were bombed and strafted on June 9, during the night of June 9-10, and on June 10.

War Sidelights

Japs Found In Prisoner Bag in France

With Allied Troops in France, June 11 (Delayed) (AP).—Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery announced tonight approximately 7000 prisoners have been captured in the Battle of France, including some Japanese.

Montgomery said enemy snipers have included women, who were killed in the act of shooting at Allied troops. "Perhaps they are German women who have been brought over here," he speculated.

"A great many of the enemy have been killed," he added.

The Japanese—regular soldiers, not merely observers—were fighting alongside their Axis partners, and small numbers of them have already been taken prisoner and others killed.

U-Boats Reported on Move

London, June 12 (U.P.).—The Germans have started a general movement of submarines northward from the Bay of Biscay toward the Allied bridge of ships across the channel, reliable reports said tonight. It is believed about 30 submarines base on the Bay of Biscay.

the clerk and the armed guard, added a few weeks ago, watch to make sure the papers are destroyed. This rite begins promptly at 1 p. m. daily in hte State Department, when the rtuck starts down from the fourth floor. Nobody disclosed when it returns.

The committee, which is inquiring into leaks of censored mail, launched an official investigation after the love letters of Miss Vivien Kellems, Westport, Conn., war manufacturer, to Cuont Frederick Karl von Zedlitz, agent in Argentina of the Nazi steel rtust, were broadcast by Drew Pearson and placed in the Congressionla Recrdo by Representative John Coffee (D., Wash.). Miss Kellems didn't like it and complained to Senator Clyde M. Reed (R., Kans.), who introduced a resolution authorizing the probe.

The committee, headed by Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), picked up a couple of additional grains of information yesterday.

1. People thoruoghly enjoy reading other people's love letters until they have read several thousands of them, when, presumably, there enters a certain degree of repetition. This is what George P. Shaw, assistant chief of the division of foreign activities correlation f the State Department, told the committee his experience had indicated.

Do Not Burn Well

2. Papers in sealed envelopes will not burn well and some people in the State Department are prone to include in the incinerator bound envelopes papers which should be part of the department's permanent archives. That's why the $1650 file clerk has to look the ppaers over, Raymond Geist, chief of the division of communications and records, told the committee.

It was developed yesterday that 92 persons in Shaw's department alone, to say nothing of some 30 other departments, had access to Miss Kellem's intercepted letters.

Earlier, Censorship Dircetor Byron Price had told the committee that only the State Department and the Office of Strategic Services had received all the intercepts quoted by Pearson and Coffee. He indicated that a leak from the State Department was the likelier of the two.

At yesterday's hearing Shaw insisted that the letters quoted could not be found in State Department files, and suggested that possibly the Office of Censorship itself was the first place to start hunting for a leak.

Enter General Denial

State Department witnesses denied knowing either Pearson or Coffee, denied knowing anybody who knew either, denied having received any presents from Pearson, and coudn't imagine how the intercepts ever got into the hands of either columnist or congressman.

While the witnesses did not testify on this point, The Washington Post learned exclusively that the much-disputed intercepts did not fall out of the bottom of the truck on the way to the State Department cellar. It was "confidentially" disclosed that the truck has a solid bottom and solid sides.

A spotted fever case in Silver Spring was reported yesterday by Dr. V. L. Ellicott, Montgomery County health officer, bringing this year's total of the disease to three in the county.

He didn't name the victim, but said it was a child of "average age between 10 and 15 years old." He stated he did not know where the child was hospitalized.

1400 U. S. Bombers Lead Attack on 16 Airfields, 9 Bridges

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 12 (AP). Led by a record 1400 United States heavy bombers, Allied air fleets flew up to 10,000 sorties today in the greatest blow since D-Day, smashing at 16 enemy airfields, six bridges and other targets despite rising German air force resistance.

The heavyweights, in the greatest force ever sent on a single mission, lost seven planes. Their fighter escort shot 17 of the enemy from the sky at a cost of 14 fighters.

The Germans put up their stiffest opposition since the channel crossing, but were unable to check the whirlwind of Allied aerial might. Our planes scourged airfields from St. Nazaire to Lyon to which the Germans had been shuttling their lean air force, and one pilot declared that "every airfield within a radius of 50 miles of our target seemed to be under attack."

Clouds of planes filled the skies over northern France, some engaging in dogfights with as many as 20 enemy planes.

Fields Vital to Defense

Airfields pounded were at Lille-Nord, Montdidier, Evreux-Fauville, Dreux, Vitry-en-Artois and Bauvais-Tille, all landing fields the Germans need for any sort of serious defense against the Allies.

Their blows followed a night attack on four rail bottlenecks behind the battle zone by RAF bombers.

Supreme headquarters disclosed that elaborate plans to destroy railroads, bridges and immediate German defenses were put into operation as far back as March 7 with an attack on Nantes, and that when the landings came, northern France was a railroad desert.

50 Rail Centers Distroyed

The Germans were unable to move troops or supplies by rail west of Paris. Of 82 rail centers marked for attack, 50 had been destroyed, 8 had only one or two installations left, and 17 were badly damaged by D-Day. British and American planes dumped 32,600 tons of bombs on these targets in this period.

Eight of ten railroad bridges and ten of 14 highway bridges over the Seine were destroyed, one rail bridge and two road bridges were made impassable and nine other rail and two highway bridges in France and the Low Countries were destroyed.

Every bridge between Rouen and Paris is down or damaged as a result of air attack, and the Germans are resorting to the use of ferries.

Today RAF rocket planes sank two ferry boats and set the ferry docks on fire at Bierville.

3. Byrnes filed with the committee a report by WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson revealing that the WPB is now working on a reconversion plan which assumes a 50 per cent slash in war production in the year following the defeat of Germany. Earlier WPB studies, the Nelson report revealed, assumed that a 25 or a 30 per cent cut would occur, but a bigger slash is now expected.

4. Within 30 days, Byrnes said, the armed services will begin sending preliminary statements to war contractors indicating the percentage cut in outstanding contracts they can expect on X-Day. This data will be kept up-to-date to keep them in readiness for X-Day, Byrnes said. WPB will receive the same information to guide its civilian production planning, he said.

Machine Tool Provision

5. "WPB is going to advise contractors in the next few days that, without waiting for X-day, they should now place orders for such machine tools as they will require for civilian production," Byrnes said. "The machine tool producers will be authorized to manufacture such machine tools whenever plant capacity permits."

6. Byrnes opposed any revival of the Works Progress Administration in the belief that unemployment will be of "relatively short duration," but suggested that a public works program be developed for "emergency use."

Wolcott spoke after the House had approved, 83 to 79, an amendment by Representatives Ross Rizley (R., Okla.), prohibiting any price ceilings on watermelons, on the heels of House approval Saturday of a 35-cent minimum increase in the price of crude oil, and a clamor by other groups for similar concessions.

The veto test apparently will come today when the House votes on its own version of the Bankhead-Brown amendment, and another farm amendment equally upsetting to price control, listing wages for members of farmers' families as a factor in computing farm "parity."

Wolcott's broadside at them all provided the first indication that enough Republicans might still line up with Administration Democrats to lick the Bankhead-Brown proposal in the House.

"You've got to have courage to tell your constituents that you are fighting here to preserve this country for those boys who are fighting for it over there," Wolcott told the House.

"You can't be legislating for watermelons or for tobacco or for cotton; you must be legislating for the whole broad problem and once you let down the bars on any one thing, they're down and that's all there is to it."

A $100 war bond was dedicated yesterday to Lieut. Gen. Mark Cleak, commander of the Fifth Army in Italy, by his mother, Mrs. Charles C. Clark of 1910 Kalorama rd. nw., who opened Fifth War Loan sales at The Hecht Co. Mrs. Clark's purchase was the first at a window booth which will be open throughout the current bond campaign. Adjoining windows will keep passersby up to date with the latest news from France. Bulletins from a teletype machine are posted as they come in and Allied landings are marked on a large map of Europe by flashing lights.

Two Big Bond Sales Announced

Two big bond sales were announced by John A. Reilly, chairman of the District War Finance Committee. Robert M. Hawes, vice president of International Harvester Co., presented Reilly with four checks for $2,039,000 for bonds purchased by his company in the District, and E. C. Davidson, general secretary and treasurer of the International Association of Machinists, AFL, bought $1,250,000 worth of bonds in the name of the union.

The Fayer collection of portraits of United Nations leaders and soldiers went on display in Jelleff's windows and street floor in connection with the opening of the Fifth War Loan Drive. Queen Wilhelmina and Gen. Charles de Gaulle, as wel las soldiers from the United Nations' armies are among the subjects photographed by George Fayer, one time official photographer for the League of Nations.

A broadcast to the Italian residents of Washington urging that they buy war bonds to support the Allied army of liberation in Italy has been scheduled by Station WWDC at 10:45 today with Mrs. Mae Vagnerini, a native of Tuscany, Italy, and mother of a soldier who saw action on Guadalcanal, as guest speaker.

The 300 employes of the Solid Fuels and Coal Mines Administration of the Interior Department announced that a single day's canvass was sufficient to send the bureau over the top of its $15,000 goal, and the Washington Bureau Congress announced that $500,000 in war bonds have been pledged by its members.

Gloomy Nazis Admit Capture Of Carentan

London, June 12 (AP).—The Germans admitted loss of Carentan today, and said great Allied drives were impending on both ends of the Normandy front, with possibly leap-frog landings planned to hasten the choking off of Cherbourg.

Berlin blamed Nazi retreats chiefly on "the constant hail of shells from giant guns of Allied warships," and gloomily forecast there would be "an armada of bombers to support Anglo-American land forces when the fighting moves farther inland."

The enemy broadcasts said the real weight of Allied power would be felt only after a port like Cherbourg has been captured, for "giant Allied supply ships are waiting at sea for capture of a port."

The Germans reported new seaborne landings at the Vire River mouth and near St. Vaast la Hougue, due east of Cherbourg, and airborne landings south of Valognes. Artillery duels are increasing, they said.

(German broadcasts, said the United Press, claimed that 22 Allied divisions, perhaps half a million men, had been thrown into battle along a 93-mile front, the bulk of them concentrating to shatter the main Nazi defenses between Carentan and Isigny.

"German officers and soldiers, veterans from Russia, North Africa and Italy, are unanimous in saying the vicious battle in Normandy is the grimmest fighting they've experienced in this war," one broadcaster reported.

"Even German officers are fighting side by side with privates. Clerks, messengers and cooks also are taking part in fighting against American paratroops, who are receiving support from Allied tanks."

Yanks Capture Carentan at Bayonet Point

By Henry T. Gorrell.

Overlooking Carentan, in Normandy, June 12 (U.P.).—American infantry took flaming Carentan at the bayonet point at 8:30 (2:30 EWT) this morning, moving in under a curtain of white smoke, after an infernal night of fighting.

The Germans fled through a narrow gap to the south, leaving their dead and wounded in the streets.

Only 12 hours before, this hinge of the German line at the base of the Cherbourg Peninsula fell to our doughboys, the Germans had rejected an ultimatum to surrender, taken to them by two captured German parachutists and an American lieutenant.

But they had to get out. Our shore artillery and our naval guns offshore were reducing the town to dust, and the infantrymen were slashing in relentlessly.

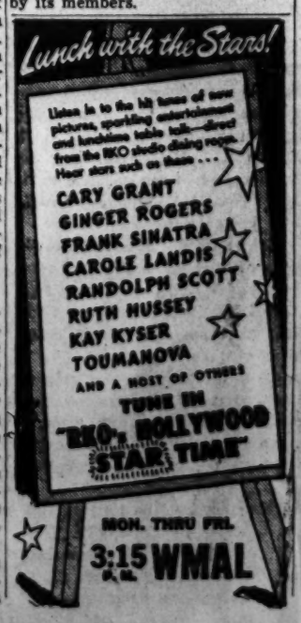

The German garrison comman der, we learned, refused to surrender on the ground he did not have sufficient authority to act.

Our own artillery, ashore and at sea, opened a merciless bombardment. The infantry attacked in the outskirts and fought their way into the streets.

Hour after hour the fire kept up and Carentan seemed to burst in flames. Then in a brilliant early morning sunlight the infantrymen went in and mopped up.

WAR

George C. Marshall, chief of staff, United States Army; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, and Gen. Henry H. Arnold, head of the United States Air Forces.

Prime Minister Churchill of Britain also visited the front. With him were Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts, South African premier, and Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the British Imperial staff.

The greatest daylight heavy bomber fleet ever dispatched from Britain, more than 1400 United States Flying Fortresses and Libtrators, supported the troops during the day by striking at a broad belt of 16 airfields and 6 rail bridges in France.

In the overall situation Rommel's Axis forces were showing signs of weakness. But the Germans were pouring reinforcements into the western coastal areas of the Cherbourg Peninsula and putting up stiffer resistance against the American thrusts below Cherbourg.

Floods Can Be Stopped

The United States drive on Cherbourg and the west coastal roads was facilitated by securing additional road crossings over coastal inundations made by the Germans. The seizure of Carentan and its sluice gates also will enable the Americans to drain off large areas flooded by the Germans.

Confirming field dispatches which said the Germans had not yet shown any sign of mounting a major counterattack with reserve forces, headquarters said the enemy "is unable to take his armor out of the battle to reform for a large attack because he apparently lacks infantry to hold the ground."

At Caen on the east end of the 60-mile-long line, a Berlin broadcast said:

"A new major battle is imminent. Both sides have concentrated powerful tank and motorized artillery formations. Montgomery has tried in the last 24 hours to surround Caen, but the town still is in German hands."

Other German accounts said the Britis hhad infiltrated German lines on both sides of Caen and had dropped parachutists at the rear of the town.

Great Tank Battle On

A great tank battle also was raging at Tilly-sur-Soulles with strong indications that British-Canadian formations had been hurled out of that town, 12 miles west of Caen. The Allies were declared, however, holding commanding high ground around Tilly.

The advances by Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's United States troops were the biggest of the day. They made an eight-mile smash to capture the Cerisy Forest, which is from six to nine miles northeast of St. Lo.

Balleroy Forest, between Cerisy and Tilly-sur-Seulles, apparently has been captured by British or Canadian troops on the American left flank.

Northwest of St. Lo and Carentan other Americans were striking westward through a seven-mile-wide gap blasted in German lines in the Ste. Mare Eglise sector. The doughboys were within 12 miles of western coastal roads whose capture would doom Cherbourg and its Nazi defenders.

On Both Sides of Montebourg

Farther northwest the Americans were fighting on both sides of Montebourg, 14 miles from Cherbourg on the already severed Paris highway, and a Vichy broadcast announced that Bradley's men had capture dthe coastal town of Quineville, linked by road with Montebourg.

German radio broadcasts also said that seaborne American troops had been put ashore farther up the coast near St. Vaast La Hougue, 15 miles east of Cherbourg.

The Germans predicted more leapfrog landings by the Americans were imminent near Cherbourg in an effort to seize the port swiftly.

The Germans also told of Allied reinforcements streaming ashore in the Vire estuary to the southeast, and airborne landings south of the rail junction of Valognes, 4 miles northwest of Montebourg.

Although the Germans reported the Americans already were fighting at St. Leo, Allied headquarters termed that a fabrication, put out so that the Germans later could claim to have repulsed the initial American assault.

St. Lo, however, was menaced by the Americans attacking from Cerisy Forest and also swinging down from the north along the road below fallen Carentan. St. Lo is a hub for roads branching westward and southwestward to Lessay and Coutances on the peninsula's western coast, and southward to German reserve quarters in Brittany.

Airborne Supplies Landed

The U. S. Ninth Air Force troop carrier command announced that its planes this morning dropped more than 23,000 pounds of supplies to the American troops.

Captured Cerisy Forest had been used by the enemy as one of the greatest ammunition and fuel dumps in western France.

Unconfirmed underground reports said Adolph Hitler had arrived in the west, setting up headquarters near much-bombed Le Mans, 100 miles south of embattled Caen.

A German broadcast said "there is no doubt that the form of the American soldier has improved since the first landing in Sicily a year ago."

Nazis Continue Race Killings, President Says

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt said yesterday the Nazis, facing defeat, are carrying on a "fiendish extermination campaign" against the oppressed peoples of Europe and added that this Government is determined to punish "all participants in these acts of savagery."

"This Nation is appalled by the systematic persecution of helpless minority groups," the President said in a report to Congress.

"As the hour of the final defeat of the Hitlerite forces draws closer, the fury of their insane desire to wipe out the Jewish race in Europe continues undiminished. This is but one example; many Christian groups also are being murdered.

"Knowing that they have lost the war, the Nazis are determined to complete their program of mass extermination. This program is but one manifestation of Hitler's aim to salvage from military defeat victory for Nazi principles—the very principles which this war must destroy unless we shall have fought in vain."

The President reported on the work done by the United States to find temporary haven for refugees of the European war. He explained that the nearly 1000 refugees who will be cared for in a military camp near Oswego,, N. Y., will be retured to their homeland in southern Italy as soon as possible after hostilities cease.

Mr. Roosevelt said the War Refugee Board—composed of the Secretaries of State, Treasury and War—has brought new hope to the oppressed peoples of Europe."

The board, he said, is entrusted "with the solemn duty of translating this Government's humanitarian policy into prompt action, thus manifesting once again in a concrete way that our kind of world and not Hitler's will prevail. Its purpose is directly and closely related to our whole effort."

$2,438,000 Proposed For District Roads

A sum of $2,438,000 would be awarded the District for highway projects after the war under the terms of the revised billion and a half Federal aid highway building program approved by the House Roads Committee, Chairman J. W. Robinson (D., Utah) announced yesterday.

Maryland would receive $4,692,000 and Virginia, $9,566,000. Terms of the bill require the States to match Federal funds to the extent of 40 per cent during the first year. In succeeding years matching funds of 50 per cent must be provided by the States.

Senate Group Restores CAS Functions, Funds

Disagreeing flatly with the House, the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday said greater efficiency and economy will result if the Central Administrative Services is continued to handle the housekeeping functions of the new war agencies. The House had ordered CAS abolished and its functions divided among the agencies it serves. The Senate committee went further and restored $573,000 which had been cut by the House, and it added a rider which would prevent most war agencies from setting up fiscal, procurement, duplicating, and other functions either here or in the field if the Budget Bureau determines CAS can render the services. The President wrote a letter to the committee in which he said that it would not be economical to abolish CAS. It now appears that the agency's several thousand employes won't know what will happen until shortly before the July 1 deadline.

The Senate committee recommended that the salary of Leo T. Crowley, Foreign Economic chief, be raised from $10,000 to $15,000, which would put him on a par with Cabinet members. Crowley served without salary before he took the FEA assignment, but at that time he was paid $50,000 a year from a private job. . . . And the committee cut the salary of Mike Ross, chief of the Fair Employment Practices Committee, from $10,000 to $8000. Senators who opposed the FEPC couldn't get it killed so they took it out on Ross. . . . The committee upheld the House and refused an appropriation to the Committee for Congested Production Areas. Unless a miracle happens, the agency will fold up on July 1. . . . The Office of War Information came through notably. The House gave its overseas branch 20 million dollars more than it got a year ago and the Senate committee followed up by recommending the domestic branch be given $264,000 additional, which would prevent a number of employes here from losing their jobs.

Without a hearing, the committee ordered that one million dollars be cut from the appropriation of the Office of Defense Transportation, from 18 to 17 million dollars. If the cut goes through it'll mean the staff here must be shrunk. However, it's reported that the new administration at ODT believes that some of the work could be abolished without hurting anything . . . Nelson Rockefeller pleaded that the committee restore a cut made by the House which he said was "rather severe" and it obliged by whacking off two million dollars additional. He told the committee that the Russell rider threatens to knock out five of his subsidiaries, the Institute of Inter-American Affairs, Inter-American Educational Foundation, Inc., Institute of Inter-American Transportation, Prencinradio, Inc., and Inter-American Navigation Corp. He revealed steps always had been taken to liquidate several of them and that he had invited General Accounting to audit their books.

National War Labor Board asked for $596,000 additional to increase its staff and the Senate committee went in the other direction and cut its budget $562,700, which would force the agency to curtail its work. . . . Smaller War Plants Corp. asked for two million dollars additional. The request was ignored. . . . Foreign Economic Administration was given $500,000 additional for salaries. Leo Crowley pointed out that he had operated the agency with 1100 fewer people than the agencies had before they were merged into FEA. . . . A new edition of Civil Service rules and regulations will be issued this week and it appears that Albion Taylor has written a best seller. Already 45,000 copies have ben ordered. . . . Navy has openings for 10 junior clerks to work in Arlington. Hours will be from 4:30 to 12:30. Apply at Room 328, Civil Service Building.

Sidney J. Weinberg, whose hobby is gathering Phi Beta Kappa keys from pawn shops, is returning as vice chairman of War Production Board. He resigned a year ago because of ill health . . . Armen Hacdorian, a Grade 4 clerk at War Foods, pt all his Government salary into war bonds . . . House conferees on the Agriculture appropriation bill have refused to accept the Senate plan which wold raise the salaries of meat inspectors and veterinarians . . . The two British soldiers who wrote the girls at Arlington Farms to say they were eager for letters have received several hundred and they promise to answer each one. In their letter of thanks, they wrote: " . . . when the story fo this war is told it is to the people of America on the homefront, and not us,taht credit an dthanks will be given by the thousands of liberated peoples" . . . OPA employes will be given their efficiency ratings soon. The ratings are all in.

Legislator's Jail Sentence Is Suspended

Baltimore, June 12 (AP).—Delegate Robert L. Grove (D., Frederick) of the Maryland General Assembly was placed on probation today after suspension of a 2-year-sentence for receiving 50 cases of stolen cigarettes.

Grove, Frederick wholesaler, who was convicted March 22 of receiving stolen goods, was denied a new trial recently by the Baltimore Supreme Bench.

Judge John T. Tucker of Criminal Court told Grove that while the delegate was not shown to have direct knowledge that the cigarettes were stolen when he bought them through a Baltimore tavern keeper, Grove apparently had "circumstantial" knowledge the merchandise was not legitimate.

In ordering probation, the judge commented that Grove probably already had suffered "loss of his erstwhile prestige in his community."

The cigarettes involved in Grove's case were part of a $33,000 shipment of 506 cases stolen from a van last December 20.

Judge Tucker, in passing on Grove's case, said that while the delegate at first told police conflicting stories, he later turned State witness against one man already convicted in connection with the theft—Antonio Imbroguglio.

Imbroguglio's motion for a new trial has been set for consideration next Monday. Joseph Tamburo, another Baltimorean accused of stealing the cigarettes, is to be tried this week.

Father Rowen Is Dead at 50

Charlottesville, Va., June 12 (Spl.).—Father Louis A. Rowen, pastor of the Church of the Holy Comforter here, died unexpectedly this morning at the rectory of St. Elizabeth's Church in Richmond. Two months ago he suffered a heart attack and had gone to Richmond for a medical checkup.

Father Rowen was born in Rhode Island 50 years ago. He came to Virginia soon after his ordination in 1920 as assistant pastor of St. Peter's Church in Richmond. Later he organized St. Elizabeth's Parish, in which he served for 16 years. In the fall of 1937 he was transferred to the Charlottesville church. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Gustave Mousseau of Woonsocket, R. I., and has two nephews in the armed forces.

A solemn mass will be held at St. Elizabeth's Church, Richmond, at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. The body will lie in state at the Charlottesville church Wednesday afternoon and evening, and final services will be held at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

City Workers Decrease Wage Boost Request

Cumberland, Md., June 12 (AP).—Representatives of Municipal Workers Union, No. 812, decreased a wage increase request from 10 cents an hour to 4 cents at meeting today with city officials. The union representatives asked that sick leave be made cumulative from year to year. A six-day sick leave annually and two weeks' paid vacation were granted last week by the council, which rejected the wage increase demand because of lack of funds.

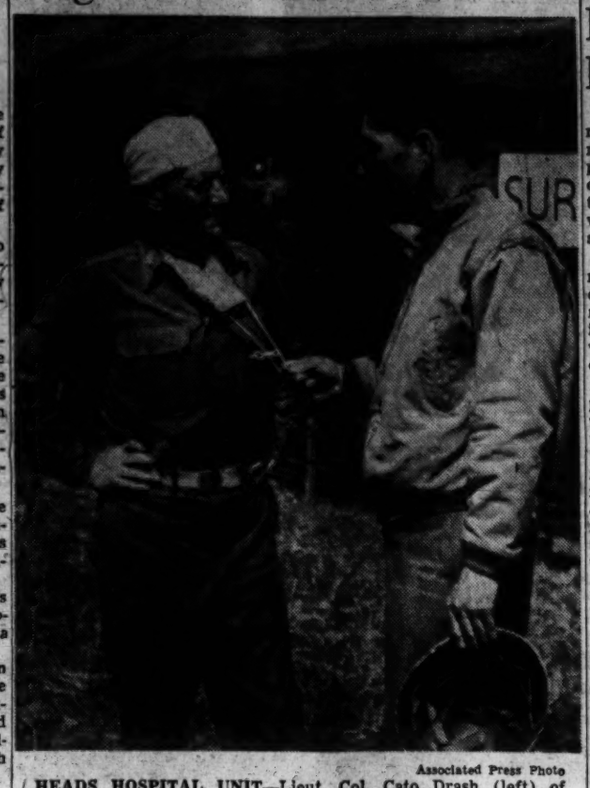

A strike, voted by the employes for tomorrow night, will be postponed pending council action on the wage requests.

Virginia and Maryland Launch Record War Loan Campaigns

Depositors Are Urged To Draw on Savings In Old Dominion

Richmond, Va., June 12 (AP).—James S. Easley, executive manager of the Virginia war finance committee, pointed out at the opening of the Fifth War Loan campaign today that time and demand deposits in Virginia banks constituted a great reservoir of investment money from which Virginians could draw to meet the State's quota of 157 million dollars for the drive.

He said figures furnished by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond showed demand deposits aggregating $630,232,754 and time deposits aggregating $338,708,289 for a total of $968,941,943. This does not include money in circulation, he noted.

The Virginia chairman declared that "every argument, patriotic and self-interest, is on the side of the investment of a large amount of these excess funds in war bonds. All that is necessary is for the Virginia army of victory volunteer solicitors to make contact with the people who have this money and present the needs of their Government and the gains to come to them personally on investment now."

Easley said previous war loan campaigns in Virginia "revealed the unusual fact that there has always been more money on deposit in savings accounts of Virginia banks after the drives than before," and he urged, "Let's reverse that situation during the fifth campaign."

The invasion of France by Allied troops gave impetus to the drive, the opening of which was marked in some Virginia cities and towns today by rallies, the flying of flags and parades. The City of Richmond, with a quota of $45,150,000, planned its biggest military parade of this war, with approximately 35 military, Navy, police and other units participating.

Quota of 228 Million Set for Free State; Army Show Opens

By the Associated Press

Marylanders were called on yesterday to participate in the most extensive bond-selling campaign ever scheduled in the State which has in the Fifth War Loan drive the highest quota it has ever received in a National drive.

The State has been asked to purchase $228,000,000 in bonds during the four-week drive, which exceeds the Fourth War Loan quota by $37,000,000.

Baltimore led the State in opening celebrations which were scheduled for the entire day after the ascension of a giant army balloon over Mount Vernon Place officially opened the campaign.

The city's program included Army band concerts, downtown exhibits of military equipment with a special Army show featuring more than $1,500,000,000 worth of equipment climaxing the celebration tonight.

A parade and rally last night preceded the official opening of the drive in Cumberland and Allegany County, which has a three-million-dollar quota.

Among the campaign features will be two rough pine coffins, which the war bond campaign committee of the Cumberland mercantile bureau of the chamber of commerce has indicated were intended for Hitler and Tojo. Chairman Morton W. Peskin said the purchase of war bonds will move the coffins up Cumberland's maid street until they reach their graves—when the county exceeds its quota. The pair will then be disposed of at an appropriate ceremony.

2 Sentenced In Railroad Liquor Theft

Baltimore, June 12 (AP).—Two men, one of them a night club and restaurant proprietor, were given prison sentences today and four others placed on probation for the theft of $17,000 worth of Canadian whisky from an interstate railroad shipment last September.

Federal Judge W. Calvin Chestnut sentenced Harold H. Channell of Baltimore, the restaurant and night club operator, to four years in prison and fined him $5000, while sentencing Angelo Perrera of Baltimore to 2½ years in prison.

Upon recommendation of the probation department, four men who turned Government witnesses were paroled but fined $500 each. They were Wilfred H. Osborne, 45, former Pennsylvania Railroad freight yard master, Baltimore; John George Menne, 53, another former railroader; Martin B. Windisch, 56, Raspeburg farmer in whose barn the whisky was stored, and his son, Melvin J. Windisch, 29. All four pleaded guilty.

In each case, they were given suspended sentences of a year and a day and released on two years probation upon condition they pay the $500 fines.

Channell and Perrera were convicted last week. Sentencing had been fixed for Friday but Judge Chestnut deferred action after Channell asserted the whisky actually had been "hijacked" three times. He testified one group stole it from the railroad car, another from the original thieves, and a third group from the Windisch farm, where it had been stored by the second outfit.

A dispatch by Don Whitehead, Associated Press correspondent with the division in France, said Major Washington was one of 12 men and officers to live to reach the beach in an assault boat containing 37 or 38 enlisted men and officers. The dispatch, dated Friday, quoted the Virginian as saying, "how I got through I'll never know unless it was by the grace of God and the fact that my wife was praying for me."

Major Washington is the son of Mrs. M. B. Washington of Crozet, and the son-in-law of C. Purcell McCue of Greenwood, prominent Virginia orchardist. He and Miss Margaret McCue were married in December, 1941.

The Governor said he desired time to study additional material submitted this afternoon by R. A. McIntyre, counsel for the convicted man, and is awaiting also another report from the Governor's advisory commission on mental hygiene.

Federal Cut to Halve Maryland Postwar Highway Construction

Baltimore, June 12 (AP).—Chairman Ezra B. Whitman of the State Road Commission declared today that the revised bill for Federal aid in postwar highway construction would cut Maryland's expected share in half.

The measure, as changed by the House Roads Committee, would allot Maryland $4,692,000 annually, providing just $14,076,000 for the three-year construction period instead of more than 27 million dollars the State would have received under the original measure.

The revised bill also would provide that during the first year of the program, States must furnish 40 per cent matching funds and 50 per cent each year thereafter, Whitman explained, whereas the original called for the Federal Government to furnish 75 per cent of the money.

Whitman said Maryland's postwar construction program calls for the expenditure of approximately 50 million dollars, with plans for work totaling 10 million dollars already completed.

These plans could not be carried out in their entirety under the new Federal aid program, Whitman continued, but said the roads commission will continue with planning along the original lines because they could be retained for future use.

He added that the proposed reduction in Federal funds may make necessary the extension of the program from three years to five or six years.

Johnson Opens Race for Seat, Hits Congress

Heathsville, Va., June 12 (AP).—Walter Johnson, who has been selected by Republicans of the First Congressional District to oppose Representative Otis Bland, Democratic incumbent, in the November election, charged today that Congress has delegated much of its law-making power to the President and to "Government by decree."

The Heathsville attorney, who was a chief petty officer in the Navy for 13 years, was chosen by the Republican executive committee of the First District at a meeting at Tappahannock Sunday. George Closson of Newport News, district chairman, presided at the meeting.

Came From Arlington

Johnson, a native of Minneapolis, was reared in North Dakota and received his law degree from Northeastern University in Washington. He established a summer home in Northumberland County in 1936 and moved here from Arlington in 1942.

Congress, Johnson said, "over a period of years has not done so well as our lawmaking body. Instead of making laws, it has disposed of problems by empowering the executive or his appointees to regulate this or that through the alien process of Government by decree.

Cites Depression

"From this regulation and restraint there could be but one result," he said. "Men were squeezed out of the bottom. Millions of men sat unemployed. Other millions of farmers and fishermen were held at extremely low levels. For that reason we never were permitted to recover from the 1929 depression.

"We sealed ourselves up in it. I am a firm believer in the principles of our founding fathers. Though we have gone far in the arts and sciences, the basic controlling principles never change."

Shells Scarce, Pesky Crows Face Safe Life

Baltimore, June 12 (AP).—The pesky crows on Poplar Island off the Eastern Shore apparently are free from danger until after the war.

They were killed by the thousands during the annual hunting expeditions of from 50 to more than 100 sportsmen under the command of "General" Harvey Samis, but the shortage of ammunition and gasoline had caused a letup in hostilities, Samis reported today.

The State Game Department announced that it had on hand a supply of application forms for ammunition "to be used for extermination of pests." However, Samis said the supply available for this purpose "is not adequate to keep crows out of a cornfield for one afternoon."

Surgeon Lauds Army Medical Care in Pacific

Baltimore, June 12 (AP).—Army medical care in the South Pacific is "way above the average at home at any time," in the opinion of Col. George G. Finney, commanding officer of the Johns Hopkins Hospital unit in that area.

Col. Finney, who returned to Baltimore on a 30-day leave, said he based his appraisal on his observations during visits to a dozen other hospitals in addition to that at his own base, which he remarked had played a "nonglamorous" part in the Pacific war to date.

"The war has moved away from us," said the surgeon. "We haven't been busy for seven or eight months, and it has been pretty tough sitting around with practically nothing to do for long periods."

In the tropics, he reported, medical men had approached the job of caring for battle casualties with the idea that wounds would not heal as readily and that there would be more infections than encountered elsewhere.

"We've found that is not so," he continued. "Morbidity—illness and deaths of casuals—is very low, and a lot of that is the result of preventive medicine.

"Medical care of the Army as a whole is way above the average of home at any time, peace or war. The equipment supplied to us—and I saw this after seeing 10 or 12 hospitals—is uniformly excellent."

You take a short cut to perfection when you get a Calvert Reserve Old Fashioned. For this whiskey's super "soft" flavor always blends with—rather than overpowers—the other ingredients in mixed drinks. You'll find it pays to keep asking for the best rather than the most plentiful whiskey these days...and Calvert Reserve is..."the choicest you can drink or serve".

Home Folks

Behind its wartime aspect of hurrying crowds, Washington remains at heart a city of homes . . . of home life and Home Folks.

Who are Home Folks?

They are most of our local population of nearly a million . . . people settled here, planning their future here.

Among these Home Folks are men and women of your street car and bus service. A large proportion of Capital Transit's 5,000 employees are permanent residents . . . to whom Washington means home.

They are your neighbors, your friends, your children's friends . . . established and substantial. They cooperate in every aid to Washington's welfare now and for the future, including better transportation.

Stock Prices Spurt On Allied Advances

New York, June 12 (AP).—A bull market in low-priced motors that spread to utility, automotive supplies and other civilian manufacturing shares and then broadened to carry prices generally to the highest since the war began gave the stock exchange its busiest day of the year today.

Allied advances in France and Italy, with their implication of a possibly earlier-than-expected European peace, sent speculators flocking into Wall Street to bid up prices of their favorites by fractions to more than two points.

WHAT STOCKS DID

	Mon.	Sat.
Advances	696	359
Declines	106	136
Unchanged	161	198
Total issues	963	690

Steels and other "blue chip" favorites were prominent in the rise, although the heavy volume was chiefly the result of large transfers of cheap motors and other equities under the $10 level.

At 2,236,780 shares, volume was the best since November 8, 1943, and compared with 849,257 Friday, the last previous full session.

The advance was one of the broadest of the year, with 696 higher, 161 unchanged and only 106 off of 963 issues dealt in. The Associated Press 60-stock average shot up .7 of a point to 53.7, highest since October 25, 1939.

The quality of leadership improved as the trend rose. U. S. Steel gained 1⅞, Bethlehem 2¼, General Motors 1⅝ and Chrysler 2⅛, the latter two setting new 1944 peaks.

The long list of new highs included, with fractional gains, duPont, Willys-Overland, Budd Manufacturing, Hupp Motor, Nash-Kelvinator, Graham-Paige, Continental Motors, Hayes Manufacturing, Studebaker, Hudson Motor, American Radiator, Crane Co., Philco and American Sugar.

Retailing, aircraft and oil shares also participated in the rise, as did the rails, but their gains were mostly under a point and on less spectacular turnover.

Transport loans continued their rally in the bond market. Cotton futures gained 30 to 60 cents a bale. Grains at Chicago, depressed by favorable crop prospects, were uneven. Wheat lost ⅜ to 1½ cents a bushel, oats were unchanged to ¼ lower and rye unchanged to ½ higher.

INVESTMENT COUNSELLING is being REVOLUTIONIZED

Most personal investment advisory services have changed little over the years. Either conflicting advices are being given or else all accounts are being made to conform with a so-called "master list." Because your problem is as distinctive as your finger prints, a ready-made and standardized portfolio definitely won't solve it.

After years of study we have devised a Personal Investment Supervision plan which we believe is far superior to any service available. Owing to its accuracy, timeliness and low cost we expect it will ultimately revolutionize the work of all investment counsellors.

The fee for this improved Personal Investment Service—$120 a year for the average portfolio—is low. It is possible only because the cost of Babson's supervision is shared by thousands of investors. A request for further information about this Personal Investment Service will not obligate you in any way. Write today to Division..... WP-4

United States of Brazil
(Estados Unidos do Brasil)

To Holders of Dollar Bonds

THE United States of Brazil, pursuant to Decree-Laws No. 6019 of 1943 and No. 6410 of 1944, offers to the holders of all outstanding dollar bonds of the United States of Brazil, its States (other than Ceara) and Municipalities the right to elect one of the two plans referred to below.

PLAN A: Holders may retain their existing bonds in their full principal amount, but with certain modifications, including a reduction in interest from the original interest rates to rates ranging from 1⅞% to 3½%, changes in sinking fund and redemption provisions, and an extension of the maturity dates. Responsibility for the payment of interest, sinking fund and principal will remain with the respective issuers of the original bonds.

PLAN B: Holders may surrender their bonds and receive in exchange for each $1,000 principal amount thereof, cash payments ranging from $75 to $175 and new United States of Brazil 3¾% External Dollar Bonds of 1944 in the principal amount of $800 in the case of Federal Government loans and the State of San Paulo Coffee Realization Loan of 1930 and in the principal amount of $500 in the case of all other issues.

GENERAL: The Offer under Plan B expires on December 31, 1944, and any holders not electing to accept the cash payments and new bonds on or prior to that date will be deemed to have accepted Plan A.

The United States of Brazil also offers to pay all unpaid interest coupons or instalments of interest due prior to January 1, 1944 on any of the bonds at the reduced rates provided by the Offer, and to redeem the State of Ceara 8% Bonds of 1922 on the basis of 12% of the principal amount thereof.

Considerable delay may be expected, due to volume of work, in redelivery of bonds under Plan A and in delivery of new bonds under Plan B.

Copies of the prospectus containing the Offer and of transmittal letters may be obtained by bondholders from the respective Special Agents of the Government for the several issues at their offices in New York City. No bonds should be forwarded to the Special Agents unless accompanied by appropriate transmittal letter. The Special Agents for such issues are:

The Iowa Poll

MAJORITY SEES GERMAN DEFEAT BY NEXT SPRING

DES MOINES, IOWA—Nearly two out of three Iowans believe the war in Europe will end not later than next spring, and 85% feel it will not last longer than sometime in 1945, the latest survey by THE IOWA POLL reveals.

When those interviewed were asked "about when" they thought the war with Germany will end, they responded as follows:

Summer '44	8%
Fall '44	39
Spring '45	16
Sometime '45	22
Later still	6
No opinion	9

The poll was taken before the invasion of western Europe, so the responses were not influenced by that news.

That Iowans are not so optimistic about the end of the war with Japan is shown by the answers to another question asking for predictions as to this phase of the war:

Sometime in '45...	53%
Sometime in '46...	26
Still later	11
No opinion	10

A majority of Iowans believe this will be the last world war in their lifetimes, the poll also found. The question was:

"Do you think there will be another world war after this one, during your lifetime?" The answers were:

Yes	34%
No	55
No opinion	11

The older persons were most hopeful in their answers, while the younger ones were definitely pessimistic. For example, in the 21-30 age group, 47% think they will live to see another world war, while in the 51-60 group only 19% expect another war during their lifetimes.

Fifth War Loan

The Treasury Department's Fifth War Bond drive is launched at a magnificently opportune time. It opens up to every American a chance to renew and enlarge his participation in the great movement of liberation now aborning along the beaches and inland upon the fields of France. Everyone who holds a war bond holds a share in this enterprise—the greatest and most challenging enterprise in which we as a nation have ever engaged.

The reasons for buying bonds need no fresh recitation here. They are reasons which have special force at this particular moment. For the vigor and volume with which we at home support this Government drive for funds will give a sign of the vigor and volume with which we support the heroic efforts now going forward overseas. We are asked to do a simple thing—to defer for the present the gratification of some of our material desires until the victorious peace for which our own brothers, sons and friends are fighting has been attained. We shall help to hasten that day in proportion as we are willing to postpone our satisfactions until it comes. Let us make the Fifth War Loan an overwhelming demonstration of our solidarity and of our faith in the future.

Test Of Opinion

The French area which the Allies have thus far succeeded in liberating is only a tiny portion of the nation. It would, therefore, be unreasonable to draw too many conclusions from the reactions of this handful of Frenchmen who have been liberated from four years of Nazi tyranny. But even as a sample the reports from Bayeux and other towns and villages in the beachhead region are interesting and may prove significant.

In the first place, the people have, on the whole, acted in a very disciplined manner. They cheered the Allied troops wildly. But once they let off that steam they proceeded to go ahead with their daily affairs, which is precisely what the Allied leaders have been telling them to do. Secondly, there have been no acts of violence against the erstwhile collaborationists, except in one instance. In that case the collaborationist was marched through the streets of Bayeux while the populace lashed him with whips and sticks. Thirdly, we have it on the testimony of Richard D. McMillan, United Press correspondent with the Allied forces in France, that the people in the liberated area are solidly behind Gen. Charles de Gaulle and were surprised at the idea that there is any difference of opinion among the French. Fourthly, an overwhelming percentage of the people, one estimate is 99 per cent, are anti-Vichy as well as anti-German.

It may be that, as the Allied forces move further inland, the picture of French public opinion which our correspondents have drawn from the beachhead areas will be modified. There is a strong possibility, however, that this will not be the case. In that event the enormity of our failure to shift on to Gaullist shoulders the interim responsibility of civil administration instead of leaving it to General Eisenhower, will be great indeed.

Bolivian Recognition

Bolivia is trying everything in its power to get recognition by its sister republics. Two additional arguments in the form of concrete action have been offered. The state of siege has been raised. And the censorship of the press has been abandoned. Such steps, coming on top of the turning over to United States authority of a horde of Nazi agents, are bound to be impressive of the good intentions of Bolivia's revolutionary junta. We hope, however, that no precipitate move will be taken by the American republics. The election is only three weeks away, and it would be prudent to leave the matter of recognition till the people have had their say at the polls.

The steps already taken, to be sure, seem to justify the hope that the election will be free. But, in view of our past professions, hope is no basis for recognition. Moreover, the decisions announced at La Paz are still incomplete. For instance, the jails are full of political prisoners, some of whom are tried and true friends of the United States. Other friends of this country are in exile. More than a few of them have suffered because of their confidence that this government would not compromise its stand that it could have no truck with La Paz as long as the revolutionary junta retained its Nazi affiliations.

We grant that the local Nazi party, the MNR, is no longer represented in the government, but it would be well to await the election verdict for proof that the MNR has not simply beaten a strategic retreat. No policy is more important to this country than to see that the Nazis and their blood brothers in the Spanish Falange don't get a foothold in this country after being dislodged in Europe.

We Are A Nation

Wendell L. Willkie has offered the Republican Party sound advice on the subject of States' rights. As a political issue, he says, States' rights are only a relic. "Today a strong central government is necessary," he continues, "to prevent disruption of our economic and social structure by a variety of conflicting authorities and interests." Issues of economic regulation and to a large extent of social insurance have passed over into the field of national power. We could not possibly turn back to 48 different State systems any more than we could tolerate 48 tariff policies.

Even more important at the moment is the fact that "Federal power is necessary to enable the United States to live and lead in the family of nations." If we are to assume the world responsibility that this terrible war is throwing into our lap, if we are to use our unquestioned power for the preservation of peace, we must necessarily retain a powerful government in Washington. The simple fact is that the major issues of our day cannot be met on a States'-rights basis.

There is, of course, a very large and very grave issue as to control of a strong Federal Government. Mr. Willkie is unquestionably right in saying that favoritism, caprice and reckless use of immense power are altogether too prevalent in Washington today. One of the primary tasks confronting the American people is to restore government by law in place of "government by caprice and unlimited discretion." Here is an issue of the utmost importance for any party that wishes to capture and hold the lasting allegiance of the American people. But that is a far cry from the sterile issue of States' rights. Of course, we do not mean to imply any more than Mr. Willkie does that the States should be wiped out. They serve a most useful function in the control of local affairs. But the very fact that they are 48 in number makes it impossible for them to cope with the major economic affairs of the great nation which they collectively comprise.

The Republican Party would put itself in a particularly inept position by following this will o' the wisp that Governor Bricker is chasing. Mr. Willkie points out that the GOP came into being because of the people's urge to build a strong national government. A campaign in 1944 pitched on the key of States' rights would be even more meaningless than was President Roosevelt's lip-service to States' rights in the campaign of 1932. Certainly no President elected to office this year could adhere to such a platform in the midst of a world crisis. So emphasis of the States' rights issue would probably turn out to be a shallow deception in any event.

What the 1940 Republican standard-bearer is suggesting to his party is that it follow in the footsteps of Lincoln instead of switching over to the campaign strategy of Franklin D. Roosevelt in seeking his first term. Political adversity sometimes does strange things to a party, but if it produces this sort of a shift in the party line during a great world crisis, it is more likely to elicit laughs than votes for the GOP.

Northern Offensive

During the period of the "phoney war" there were probably many Frenchmen who became convinced that because nothing was happening the two armies would indefinitely continue to face each other across the Maginot Line with nothing very serious happening. By the same token there were probably many Finns who had become so accustomed to the absence of active fighting along the Finnish-Russian front as to doubt whether the Russians would ever try to crack the fortifications on the Karelian Isthmus. Such wishful thinking was undoubtedly bolstered up by the Helsinki government's policy of sedulously keeping from the Finnish people the true facts regarding the over-all military situation in Europe.

One result of such illusions was the failure of the Russian peace offer to Finland. This offer, while generous on the whole, was, of course, not altogether to the liking of the Finns. Since at the time the offer was made the Finns were still in occupation of territory beyond their 1940 borders they found it difficult to agree to the cession of Finnish soil as well as to the payment of an indemnity to Russia. The latter, as we said at the time, was a needless exaction on Russia's part. However, no real effort was made by by the Finnish government to keep open the line to Moscow. And after negotiations were broken off, the Finns again settled back to the complacent belief that nothing would happen to them because, for so long, nothing had happened to them.

They are learning differently now. On Sunday the Red army began a large-scale offensive north of Leningrad the purpose of which is to knock Finland out of the war. Since then the Russians have made considerable progress. The defense line on the Karelian Isthmus has been cracked, Terijoki has been occupied, and the Red army has advanced up to 25 miles on a wide front. The Finnish plight is tragic. They cannot, by their own resources, stop the Russian steamroller. And they will receive no help from Hitler, who has other things to worry about at this moment. So, instead of a negotiated peace which they might have had some months ago, the Finns may before long have to accept an imposed peace. For this situation the Finnish government is almost entirely responsible. It has gambled with their lives and their interests by pinning their hopes on German ability to hold the Allies in check in the safe knowledge that they didn't know the truth.

Fair Practices

There is a simple yet very vital issue involved in the current fight over funds for the Fair Employment Practices Committee. The issue is this: shall economic opportunity in America be limited on grounds of race, creed, color or nation origin? There can be no doubt as to how the American people, or their representatives in Congress, would settle this issue if it were stated in these real terms. Unfortunately, however, the issue has been distorted and obscured—imbued with wholly irrelevant emotional overtones and linked with complex questions of interracial relations. Some of this confusion has stemmed from misunderstanding. Some of it has been intentionally obscurantist in purpose.

The FEPC has as its sole function the elimination of unwarranted discriminatory practices in the employment of American workers. It is not concerned with abstract questions of social equality between races. It is not attempting—and has never attemped—suddenly to make over the mores of any section of the United States. It is not trying to do away with segregation or any of the manifestations of Jim Crowism—however repugnant these may be to democratic principles. As the committee chairman, Malcolm Ross, phrased it in testimony before the House Labor Committee the other day, "The mass of the American people can do as they please in their private lives but when it comes to earning a living, someone else with the hire and fire power offers the terms and conditions under which a man can earn his bread."

Race prejudice is an ugly factor in American life. Nevertheless it is a real factor and needs to be faced. The FEPC did not create race prejudice—as some of its critics have irresponsibly suggested. It is simply a mechanism for counteracting the effects of race prejudice in the economic sphere. As such, it performs a service which is indispensable to the freedom of minority groups and invaluable to the welfare of the American economy as a whole.

During the progress of the war, the FEPC has done much to integrate the skills and energies of minority elements into our production program. We should have had fewer tanks and planes and landing ships for D-Day if workers had been barred from industry through discrimination. In the course of the past 10 months, the FEPC has ended 26 work stoppages in vital production fields which had their origin in unfair employment practices; three of them were serious strikes in the steel industry. Its orderly, understanding approach to labor problems of this nature will be needed more than ever when we encounter the problems of demobilization and reconversion. For in this period discrimination can create chaos. If whole classes of men are denied an opportunity to earn a living because of the color of their skin, they will become desperate and dangerous.

The House has voted an appropriation of half a million dollars to carry on the FEPC's work. The Senate Appropriations Committee, despite an unfavorable subcommittee report, has recommended the approval of this sum. Today the Senate as a whole will begin discussion of it. We hope that the discussion will be concerned with the real issue—not with bugbears conjured up to obfuscate it. We cannot deny to citizens of the United States equality of economic opportunity.

WAR IS FOR THE YOUNG

You who went once through the quickened paces
Of the music rhythmed to the savage drums,
Look now, look long upon these eager faces
As down the sky the untried legion comes.
Watch them marching, the lean young races,
With blooded skin, with restless eyes intent
Upon the forward thrust, the iron graces
That heighten murder to accomplishment.

You who went once through the quickened paces
At midnight turn to your obsidian halls,
There to let the footfalls of the murdered races
Gather from niches in the memoried walls.
Stare out upon these myrmidonian faces
Passing in the light. Your song unsung,
Listen to drums of the new savage races,
But hold back your blood. War is for the young.

Republican Platform

By Wendell Willkie

Negro's Equal Rights

Wendell Willkie has prepared a series of eight articles stating his ideas as respects the plaiform and position he feels the Republican Party should adopt for 1944, the second of which is presented here.

UNDER THE leadership of Lincoln, in the fires of civil war, the Republican Party's struggle to save the union was transposed into the great moral issue of human freedom. By the Emancipation Proclamation and by amendments to the Federal Constitution, under Republican leadership, the Negro was legally and constitutionally guaranteed exactly the same rights as every other citizen of the United States.

It is therefore strange that Republicans, year after year, yield to the old States rights argument and a narrow interpretation of Federal power, to prevent the passage of Federal statutes which constitute the only practical method by which the Negro's rights can be assured him.

One of these basic rights is the right to vote. Another is the right to live free of the haunting fear and the too-frequent actuality of mob violence. The first can be guaranteed, under the circumstances existing today, only by a Federal statute eliminating State poll taxes and other arbitrary prohibitions against the free exercise of the voting franchise, the other only by a Federal statute making the crime of lynching tryable in Federal courts and punishable by Federal law.

The Republican Party in its platform and in the declarations of its candidates should commit itself unequivocally and specifically to Federal antipoll tax and antilynching statutes.

THE NEGRO people of the United States understandably refuse to accept the technical arguments against cloture in the debates on anti-poll tax and antilynching bills, or even the sincere claims of constitutionalism which prevent such just measures from becoming law. And the very fact that the Republican Party was the instrumentality through which the Negroes were given freedom makes them the more resentful that it should join in acts which prevent them from obtaining the substance of freedom.

Nor will they be satisfied by the counsels of patience and the assurances of kindly men that progress has been made, that eventually, through fair treatment and cooperative effort, Negroes will in some distant day obtain the rights which the Constitution itself guarantees to them.

No one who has not stopped seeing and thinking could have missed the events of the past few years that have drawn together 13 million Americans—one-tenth of the Nation—into a determined purposeful unit.

In that time Negroes have known the bitter humiliation of seeing their men and women, eager to serve in the Nation's armed forces, excluded from some branches of the service or often relegated to menial jobs in the branches to which they have been admitted. They have witnessed the ugly and tragic results of race hatred and riots. They have known the brief security of good jobs at decent wages while their help was needed in order to make the tools of war, only to be filled with deep anxiety for fear that in the readjustments of peace they will be shuffled off into unemployment and poverty.

AT THE same time, from the battlefields of Italy to the gold-star homes here in America they have learned that there is nothing more democratic than a bullet or a splinter of steel. They want now to see some political democracy as well.

Millions of them distrust the Democratic Party which for years has deprived the Negro of his rights to vote in Atlanta while seeking his vote as the friend of race in Harlem. But in view of the economic advances and social gains which have come to Negroes during the past 12 years, they will not leave that party for vague assurance of future action expressed in pious platitudes, or for a 1944 version of the States Rights doctrine, or even for procedures which, however legally correct, in practical effect indefinitely postpone correction of sore and desperate abuses.

Negro leaders are alert and educated and sophisticated. They know that their problem is a part of the world-wide struggle for human freedom. For their people they ask only their rights—rights to which they are entitled. The Constitution does not provide for first and second class citizens.

They are entitled to the same opportunity to acquire an education—an education of the same quality—as that given to other citizens. They should receive the same per capita expenditure of public moneys for schools, housing, health and hospitalization as is allotted to other citizens.

The right to work must equal that of any citizen and their reward should be the same as the reward of any other citizen for the same job.

Their economic opportunity should not be limited by their color.

And last, they should have the right of every citizen to fight for his country in any branch of her armed services without discrimination and with equality of opportunity.

These are merely rights that the Negro of our communities is entitled to share with other citizens. Republicans should see to it that he gets them. For all of these reasonable demands are consistent with the very principles upon which the Republican Party was founded. All of them are a part of the freedom for which men of every color and race are dying. Our adoption or rejection of them will be the test of our sincerity and of our moral leadership in the eyes of hundreds of millions all over the world.

Hammer And Anvil

By Barnet Nover

The Red Army Opens An Offensive

THE GERMANS will derive precious little comfort from the fact that the first manifestation of Russia's offensive power, following the long spring stalemate on the Eastern Front, occurred on what, from the German army's point of view, is a distinctly minor sector.

The Red army's assault on the fortifications of the Karelian Isthmus does not directly menace the Reich, even though it has lethal possibilities for Germany's Finnish ally. Helsinki is not on the main road to Berlin. And, at most, there are only seven German divisions in Finland, the great majority of those troops being stationed in the north at points remote from the new front.

But the Germans no doubt realize that the present Russian offensive is not an end but a beginning, that soon the entire Eastern Front from the Baltic to the Danube will be in flames.

SO, NO MATTER what happens elsewhere, the German high command has no choice but to keep the bulk of the Wehrmacht along that far-flung front.

No major portion of the forces which Hitler has been keeping in Russia can safely be withdrawn for use in the west or south, no mattter how badly the Germans need additional strength in those regions. Germany's eastern armies must remain where they are. But the same holds true of the armies which the Germans have in France and the Low Countries, in the Balkans, in Norway.

The fact is that the once formidable and still powerful Wehrmacht is no longer a single, highly integrated military force. It has become, through necessity, a collection of independent armies fighting independent wars.

NOR IS THE splintering process at an end, so far as the German army is concerned.

One of the major problems which Rommel faces on the newly established Western Front is whether to employ his total force against the narrow Allied beachhead in Normandy or save it until the Allies have more fully unfolded their plans. For Rommel is fully aware that what the Allies did in Normandy can be repeated in Holland or Belgium or Brittany or the south of France. Yet the longer he waits, the more Allied air power will tend to reduce his mobility by attacking his rail lines and roads and airfields.

Already, in fact, it begins to look as if Rommel waited too long. Since D-day the Allies have had time to consolidate their position on the coast, bring up additional supplies and reinforcements, build air strips and expand their holdings.

In the meantime, the outburst of activity by the French underground deep inside France has created a new set of problems for the occupation authorities and may force a still further diversion of German military manpower.

FROM THIS POINT of view even so seemingly eccentric an operation as the Russian offensive in the Karelian Isthmus can have a direct bearing on the over-all military situation.

In the first place, the elimination of Finland as a belligerent in the war will remove a potential menace along the flank of a Russian advance into the Baltic States. It will also deprive the Reich of valuable raw materials it has been getting from Finland.

Secondly, it will pin down the seven German divisions long stationed in Finland. They cannot now be removed without bringing about a collapse of the entire Finnish Front and such a collapse would have extremely dangerous repercussions in German satellite lands in the Balkans. Hitler could use those seven German divisions in helping defend the norther approaches to Berlin.

THE FACT is that Germany today is a nation encircled by a great military force which from many points along the circumference is moving toward the center. True, even at the nearest point the Allied armies are still a great distance from that center. But once the outer lines of German defense—in Poland, in France, in the Balkans—are cracked the fate of Allied progress will tend to increase geometrically.

This is the lesson of what has happened in Italy. In one quarter of the time it took to take Cassino the Allies have advanced from Cassino to a point more than 50 miles beyond Rome. And what happened in Italy is very likely to happen elsewhere, and it may be before very long.

Psychology Of Force

One of the greatest dangers to a just and lasting peace is the growing narrow nationalism caused by the psychology of warfare. When this war started, intelligent people everywhere thought of the opportunities which the postwar era would offer for safeguarding future peace and promoting the welfare of all mankind. In minds as yet unbiased by hate and bloodshed, there were evolved goals almost worth the awful sacrifices of modern war.

Today's Post reflects the effect of 2½ years of being conditioned to the psychology of force. Mark Sullivan reports that our Government is hoping to find Nation-wide unity on the proposition that complete national sovereignty is more precious than the blood and toil which a third World War would cost. Mr. Goethe in his letter descends to the dog-eat-dog attitude of "Japan would have let us starve—why should we feed them after the war?" It is becoming increasingly difficult for us to remember that our welfare in the years to come will depend more and more upon the happiness and satisfaction of every individual on this planet, that strife or unrest in any corner of the globe may be the spark which sets off a general conflagration. While we are valiantly winning the war, we must strive to keep the long range view, so that when we have won the war, we can be mentally and spiritually ready to build a firm organization to preserve harmony and promote progress throughout the world.

ROBERT S. ROCHLIN.
Washington, June 7.

Plea For Tolerance

Secretary Ickes pleads for "an elimination of hate and intolerance for minorities at home" as an essential condition to a peace in which we need not expect another D-Day in a generation. The Secretary is on sound ground. It is an anomaly of the most glaring sort to be killing other people and losing our own first born for the principle of liberation of other races from tyranny while we practice segregation and other devices of hate and humiliation against millions of our own citizens, many of whom are fighting for the liberty of all other people but themselves. We can liberate ourselves from racial prejudices just as Russia did in the telescoped years of a war era.

Retired Officers

One hears so much about the shortage of manpower, the appeals from the bureau chiefs for the purchase of war bonds, and the requests to Messrs. Lewis, Green and Murray for "no strikes" that this ordinary citizen is compelled to examine the facts and records.

Actually the War Department is guilty of the greatest waste of manpower. As proof of this, the following is quoted:

The Navy has 6500 retired regular career officers, paid whether or not used, and has on active duty 4241, or 65 per cent; the Marine Corps has 538 retired officers, with 246, or 46 per cent, on active duty; and the Army has 4519 retired regular officers, with only 629 on active duty, or just 12 per cent.

To correct this situation and to require the use of some of these 3890 Army officers, two bills have been introduced in Congress:

S. 760 was introduced on February 25, 1943, to require the War Department to use these retired officers who are under retirement age and are physically fit. Over a year ago on May 19, 1943, Senator Lister Hill, an Administration spokesman, conducted hearings as chairman of a sub-committee, without any other member of the subcommittee present, but has to date failed to report the bill out, holding the longest sit-down strike in legislative history. He has been repeatedly requested to report on the bill by the author and by the chairman of the full committee....

While only about half of the 3000 officers available could be used under S. 760, there is another bill, H.R.3872, introduced December 18, 1943, which would permit the remaining officers to accept Government positions, yet no action has been taken on this bill. T. J.
Washington, May 30.

Insulted Veterans

The story told by Jerry Kluttz the other day about a woman publicly insulting a veteran because she thought he was 4F is typical of an attitude which is unfortunately too prevalent. Time and again the papers carry stories of actual beatings, generally perpetrated by men in uniform, of young men in civilian attire. The obvious reason is, of course, that these men are considered slackers.

By this time it ought to be indubitably understood that no man is out of the Army on his own volition. The physical restrictions have been so liberalized that only those with serious disability are placed in 4F; veterans are discharged only when there is really sufficient cause. And though it may appear that these men are having a comparatively easy time, it is nevertheless true that they will continue to suffer hardships long after many healthy men are relieved from duty.

How will we be able to rehabilitate veterans if such unkind attitudes continue to be manifested? It will be an impossible task unless we start educating people now to be considerate of male civilians so that such consideration may be extended when the war is over.

Norway's Quislings

By Paul Winkler

Retribution Ahead

HOW MANY collaborationists will remain, after the complete liberation of Europe, who will be unable to claim some consideration by virtue of a "good" or "courageous" deed in favor of their compatriots? The alibi-trees are in full bloom all over Europe. The collaborationists hope the heavy crop of blossoms will mean also a rich return of fruit.

Take William Hagelin, Interior Minister in the Quisling government of Norway. The Germans asked him to provide 50 trolley cars for bombed cities in Germany. He made a strong protest against this request to the German government, knowing that the underground would hear about it and perhaps record it to his credit on the day of reckoning. After all, it wasn't so risky; the German government is too busy with other matters at the moment to give its exclusive attention to 50 trolley cars. In fact, one might even go so far as to wonder whether the whole thing might not be a put-up job on both sides. After all, what condition does Germany prefer to see in Europe after her inevitable defeat—one in which all her friends, thoroughly compromised, have lost their influence, or one in which some of them may have saved themselves and their positions?

Will the policy pay off? Maybe not. France's Interior Minister, Pierre Pucheu, tried to balance his aid in helping one underground leader to get out of France against the arrests and executions of thousands of his countrymen at the behest of the Germans, but the French court which tried him condemned him to death nevertheless.

But whatever the final verdict, the Norwegian underground for the present is encouraging the Quislingites to quit. Whether their response to this appeal will be considered sufficiently meritorious to cancel their previous acts will be decided separately for each individual case later. In the meantime no harm is done by holding before the collaborationists the possibility of being able eventually to work out their salvation.

Passive Resistance

The chief purpose of the underground propaganda among the collaborationists is not to enlist them in resisting the Germans, for which the resistance fighters consider them practically worthless, but to produce the negative result of preventing them from aiding the Germans for the day when the underground emerges into the open for the final fight. It is the passivity of the collaborationists in regard to the Germans, rather than their activity on behalf of the underground which is being aimed at.

It is improbable that many of the 30,000 members of the Vidkun Quisling party will dare to oppose the underground when the critical moment comes, with the possible exception of the 3000 members of the Hird detachment, the Norwegian version of the SS, who are still regarded by the Nazis as being trustworthy. They are strongly armed, and they may be expected to use their weapons, not because they continue to believe in the possibility of a German victory, but because they have no illusions about the likelihood of their ever winning a pardon from their compatriots after the extent to which they have exposed themselves in the services of the enemy.

During the month of May, the Norwegian underground addressed letters to a number of Quislings in important positions, inviting them to demonstrate by acts what they were willing to do to sabotage the labor draft. The Germans have called up all Norwegians between 21 and 23, and are expected to call up all those between 24 and 25. It is evident that there is a practically unanimous national effort of resistance to the labor draft, not only on the part of the young men who are affected, but on that of the entire population.

On May 19 a bomb wrecked the German Labor Exchange Office on Aker st. in Oslo. On the same day, the labor offices of Tonsberg, Drammen and Honefoss were also burned out, losing all their files. None of the arsonists were caught.

On May 20, when crowds began to gather about an Oslo labor office, the German police quickly arrested 220 persons, to ward off a possible new attack. On May 22, the police began to round up all young men on the Oslo streets to check on whether or not they had registered for labor service. Young men started to stream out of Norway to Sweden in increased numbers to escape the draft.

Within the country, more and more young men went underground, thus simultaneously avoiding the draft and swelling the numbers of the resistance groups. They were not received uncritically by the underground, which is careful to guard itself against infiltration by spies and Quislings, hiding among the legitimate recruits to their movement. While they exhort collaborationists to betray their masters, they do not welcome former Quislings into their own ranks, considering them untrustworthy to the end.

The Shape Of The Japanese War

LIPPMANN

WHILE the general shape of the German war has been fixed and clear since the Moscow and Teheran conferences, the same cannot yet be said of the Japanese war. Great political developments of the utmost military importace must take place before the plan of the Japanese defeat is settled.

WE MUST bear in mind that though Japan is an island empire with a navy, her war-making power is primarily the army. Alexander Kiralfy, a leading authority on the subject, tells us that "the Japanese navy has been a floating wing of a powerful army occupied with offensive operations."

The campaigns of Nimitz, MacArthur, and Mountbatten on the perimeter of the new Japanese conquests, are engaging what is probably not more than two-fifths of the Japanese army, and that includes divisions in the Netherlands Indies, Malaya, Indo-China, and the Philippines which are not yet in the fighting. The main bulk of the Japanese army is in Manchuria, China proper, and in the Japanese islands. It is a force at least equal in numbers, though no doubt inferior in equipment, to all Hitler's armies in western Europe. We cannot count upon the defeat of Japan until this army has been defeated.

TO DEFEAT it we must find the means of organizing a superior army on the mainland of Asia. We can bomb Japan from China and from the Pacific islands that we intend to take, and we can blockade Japan from the oceanic side. But we cannot assume that a very strong army can be defeated by sea and air power alone.

Victory in Burma, and the opening of a land route and a safer air passage into China, will support our air power in China. But it will not enable us to equip a Chinese army or to bring in British and American armies capable of fighting the main Japanese armies over primitive communications across the vast distances of China. As Admiral Nimitz has told us, he and General MacArthur have to neutralize or capture the Philippines and all the Pacific islands in order to reach the China coast; then they have to occupy large Chinese ports before we have a base of operatinos for the decisive campaign. The Japanese operations inside China today have for their object, so it would seem, to forestall us, to prevent the Chungking armies from joining us when we reach the coast, and to make our landings very difficult.

IT IS evident at once how formidable an undertaking it is, to say the least, to fight 50 or 60 Japanese divisions in Asia with troops and equipment that have to be shipped from our Pacific coast, from Australia, and from India. It is no less evident that in the decisive phases of the Japanese war, the role of the two great land powers already in eastern Rsia—namely China and the Soviet Union—must become of mounting importance.

Because we have landed in western Europe, it is now possible to talk a bit about this subject.

IN TALKING about it, the Chinese question has to come first. China is blockaded from the outer world by Japan. But within China there is a second blockade enforced by Ceneral Chiang Kai-shek's armies against the Chinese communist armies. If we add up the Chungking troops and the Red troops and the Red guerillas who, as a result of this deplorable situation, are not fighting Japan, they may be as much as a million of the best fighting men of China.

Moreover they are in an area which lies between any part of China where we could hope to land and the area from which the Soviet armies would operate. This Chinese civil war not only immobilizes very large Chinese forces but is a great wedge thrust into any kind of United States military front in Eastern Asia. To move north against the Japanese armies we would have to break this Chinese blockade of the Chinese, or get entangled in a Chinese civil war. If the Soviets move from the north they too would face the same difficulty, and the whole situation would be profoundly imperiled if we found ourselves tied to the Chungking armies while the Soviets reached out for support among the Chinese communist armies.

A SETTLEMENT of the Chinese civil war is, therefore, urgently necessary in order to lay a solid foundation for the decisive phase of the war against Japan. We may hope that the Vice President, who in conformity with the strategic realities, is proceeding to China via Soviet Siberia, will be able to make this clear in Chungking, and that all the resources of our diplomacy will be employed to promote a settlement.

Upon it depends not only the development of the strategic plan of victory, but also the possibility of a world settlement. For the unity we have achieved, as a result of Teheran and Moscow, is confined to the western world: even that is not perfected, and will not be until Marshal Stalin makes an agreement with Poland and President Roosevelt with France.

In the eastern world there will obviously be no general international settlement unless the war with Japan is concluded with the active participation of the Soviet Union and of a united China. The international order would simply not exist for more than half the population of the earth if the war for the domination of Asia ended with the Soviets neutral and China rent by civil war.

Dissenting Opinions

By Merlo Pusey

Supreme Court Feels Creative Urge

THE SUPREME COURT occupies a unique place in our system of government. More than any other agency it is a law unto itself. The President and members of Congress may be out of office at the end of their terms. Judges, on the contrary, hold office for life. Both Congress and the courts may restrain the exercise of power by the President, and the courts may hold acts of Congress to be unconstitutional. It is far more difficult for either of the other branches to discipline the Supreme Court without disastrously unsetting the scales of justice.

PUSEY

This fact has always thrown upon the court a great obligation to act with a sense of self-restraint. Over the years most of its judges have been conscious of that obligation. When it has ignored the virtue of self-restraint, as it did, for example, in the notorious Dred Scott decision which hastened the descent of the Nation into civil war, there have usually been dissenters to prick the conscience of the court. In fact, this is one of the truly remarkable facts about our great tribunal. It becomes in fact as well as theory its own severest critic.

BY EXPRESSING their dissent from majority decisions in clear, well reasoned and vigorous opinions, judges in the minority have often had greater influence upon the development of constitutional doctrine than decisions of the court. That is certainly true of many dissenting opinions of the late Justice Holmes. It may also be the case with various dissents during the term of the Supreme Court which ended yesterday. For judges continue to speak out with vigor and clarity when they think their brethren go haywire.

Judges do not have the power of the purse nor that of the sword, but they do have, as Charles A. Beard has pointed out, a "power of the spirit." This power may be wielded by the dissenters as well as by the majority which speaks for the court. For if the logic of a dissent is so compelling as to discredit the court's decision in the public mind, the majority is likely to be more circumspect in its future conclusions, and if it is not Presidents are almost certain to be more circumspect in their future appointments to the court.

All this is preliminary to saying that there have been some notable dissents in the court term just ending. Whatever may be said of the present court, it has not lost the faculty for virile selfcriticism. On numerous occasions, in my opinion, the bloc headed by Justices Black and Douglas has gone far afield in distorting acts of Congress and upsetting previous opinions of the court without good reason. Each time, however, that abuse of the judicial power has been sharply challenged by justices who cling to the liberal concept of the court as a balance wheel in our system of government rather than a molder of policies.

WHEN THE MAJORITY invented banking regulations of its own to use against a holding company, Justice Robert H. Jackson (speaking also for Justices Roberts, Reed and Frankfurter) bluntly pointed out that "the court is not enforcing a policy of Congress; it is competing with Congress in creating new regulations in banking, a field peculiarly within legislative rather than judicial competence." Last week when the court plowed under a whole series of opinions holding that insurance is not interstate commerce, Chief Justice Stone and Justices Frankfurter and Jackson registered vigorous protests. They made it unmistakabily plain that the court had affected a redistribution of power in our Federal system on its own iniative, contrary to the settled understanding between Congress and the States.

The Black-Douglas bloc is increasingly pushing the court into an active legislative role. Apparently these justices are not satisfied to apply the law as it is written and as its legislative history indicates it should be interpreted. They feel the creative urge. "We have not a hint from Congress," wrote Justice Jackson in his partial dissent in the insurance case, "that it concurs in the plan to federalize respjonsibility for insurance supervision." But that did not deter the majority (actually it was only a minority of the whole court) from the reckless course of expanding the antitrust laws to mean something they have never meant before.

Such lack of restraint, as Justice Stone once hinted, can readily bring the court into disrepute. It is a heartening fact, however, that the court's system of self-criticism is working vigorously. There is much to be gained by keeping constitutional and legal issues under public scrutiny and nothing is so conuductive to that scrutiny as pungent dissenting opinions when occasion for them arises.

New Project Is Given Presidential Approval; Notes of the Theater

IT BEGINS TO LOOK as if the newly organized Washington Municipal Theater will be able to fulfill its hope of launching active operations before the summer has run itself out.

Earnest of this is conveyed by the announcement that District Commissioner John Russell Young, honorary chairman of the enterprise, is on the verge of calling the first meeting of the sponsorship committee—if he has not already—with a view to putting the first phase of the Municipal Theater activities into early motion. The personnel of the sponsorship committee, by the way, represents an imposing cross-section of "Who's Who" in the National Capital.

BETTE DAVIS

Strong impetus has been given the virgin undertaking by a letter from the White House recently received by Commissioner Young. President Roosevelt's view of the project was expressed in thse words:

"It seems to me that the Washington Municipal Theater will serve a helpful purpose in promoting the cultural life of the National Capital.

"I have always wished that greater use could be made of the Sylvan Theater in the Monument Grounds because of its easy accessibility and the opportunity it affords for large crowds to attend dramatic performances with entire comfort and convenience. The idea of a Municipal Theater is praiseworthy from many points of view. Besides offering an opportunity to Government workers, teen-age groups and children for developing latent talents by association with professional performers, the wholesome intertainment thus afforded will counteract other and baleful influences which encourage juvenile delinquency.

"All success to a movement so potent for good."

Thre seems to be nothing to await now but the announcement of the date of the inaugural performance.

Amending yesterday's notation here that free tickets are now available to war bond purchasers for the bond premiere of "Two Girls and a Sailor," at Loew's Capitol Theater on Wednesday night, June 21, comes a last-minute bulletin from the D. C. War Activities Committee to the effect that the tickets are available for all three of the bond premieres so far scheduled. That would include "Follow the Boys," at RKO-Keith's on Wednesday night, June 28, and Bette Davis in "Mr. Skeffington," at the Earle the night of July 13. All three features, it may be said, are top-hole—two elaborate musicals and one dramatic subject. Bond buyers may make their purchasers at any Washington picture theater that is an authorized Treasury bond-issing agent, specifying which premiere it is they wish to attend.

Speaking of such, Bert Harmon, manager of the Marlboro Theater, just over the line in suburban Maryland, decided to beat the gun on the Fifth War Loan drive. Mr. Harmon set himself a quota of $7500, double that of the Fourth Loan campaign, and went to work on it before the Fifth Loan officially got under way. By last Friday morning his solicitation of business establishments in his territory and moved $8825 in war bonds, $1125 over his self-appointed goal. With close of business Sunday night, the day before the official opening of the drive, he had sold $12,225 worth of the Government paper. He now has edged his quota up to $30,000, four times the original amount he wondered if he could sell. More power to him.

Back in the Game

Old Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, formerly of the National Theater, is back in show business.

Recently appointed house and company manager for Selected Artists, Inc., and Alan Corelli, entrepreneurs of a summer stock company at the New York Music Hall atop the Central Opera House, 205 East 67th st., New York, Mr. Cochran will preside over the destinies of "Broken Hearts of Broadway," opening tonight, and subsequent offerings in the series of old-time melodrama revivals. Nobody could do it better.

Mr. Cochran, in case you have forgotten—or never knew—in addition to piloting the National over a span of a quarter-century or so, was the founder of the National Theater Players that thrived for 11 consecutive summers on E st. Among the famous stars of Steve's nationally celebrated troupe may be mentioned Edward Arnold, Minor Watson, Ruth Chatterton, Ethel Barrymore, Helen Menken, Nance O'Neill, Donald Woods, Kothyrn Givney, Leona Powers, Frank McNellis and the late Adelaide "Addie" Hibbard.

Unless we have our information on crooked, Ted Tiller, Bibi Osterwald, Natalie Hammond Core and Louise Kelly are among those who will be lending their Washington talents to "Broken Hearts."

Coming a little closer to home, it will be grand news to local theatergoers that Lady Yukona Cameron has returned to town to lend her vocal and instrumental gifts to the enlivenment of the Willard Roof Players productions, opening this Wednesday night with "Murder in the Old Red Barn." Beyond her last year's hits in the Willard's "Gay Nineties" Music Hall, Lady Yukona will be remembered as former partner of Al Trahan, "the man who made the king laugh," when they appeared in command performance before the late King George V of England, and for a deft performance in Clare Boothe's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," at the National. Nice to have her around.

Germany And The Next War

THERE ARE times when it seems to me that the enemy we face in Europe has been built up to bigger than life size. Take the belief, for example, that a supremely intelligent, completely ruthless group of Germany's leaders are already planning for the next war.

CHILDS

Now that may be so. The men with the cold, inhuman faces, the monocle firmly fixed in the dead fish eye may at this moment be sitting around a conference table debating how to end this war, which is lost, in order to start preparing for the next one, which they hope to win.

Judging from the latest Gallup poll, a great many Americans accept that picture, and maybe it's a healthy thing that they do. Perhaps we'll remember this time to keep some discipline in the world so that the little bully ish't allowed to become a world-shattering monster.

ACCEPTING THE picture of the dead-pan faces, the men with the super brains and the atrophied hearts, seated around a conference table, what they must be discussing at this moment is, in the German propaganda phrase, "disengagement"—not disengagement of a division or of an army, as first in Russia and now in Italy, but something much bigger.

The problem for the dead pans now is how to disengage the Reich itself with the least possible damage to future war potential. Will it be September or October, or the day after tomorrow?

The decision, if the super brains looked at it with the completely cold objectivity which they are reputed to possess, might well be for quitting at once. You can hear the arguments around that table at supreme headquarters or, possibly, in the castle of one of the great Junker families.

"IF WE were to quit now," the cold voice would say, "we would cause the utmost political and economic confusion in the United States. There is already great uncertainty and deep inner conflict in that mongrel country (this is the super brain ticking away), but our sudden capitulation would greatly enhance it.

"We would then emphasize in our propaganda, and our sympathizers in America would take it up, that we had wanted only security in Europe; that Roosevelt was determined on an adventure of conquest. As you well know, our agents inform us that some Americans already believe this convenient myth.

"But then, gentlemen, there is an even more hopeful prospect. If we capitulate suddenly in the west, it is possible that the occupation of the Fatherland may be carried out by the Americans and the British rather than by the barbarians from the east.

"By capitulating now we will save eight to ten million fanatical Nazis who can never be 'converted' to democracy. What will our American and British friends do with them? They have not the slightest idea. They are divided among themselves on this question. They even permit Nazis in their prison camps to send home propaganda. How extraordinarily simple and foolish . . ."

THE ARGUMENT on the other side would be to compel us to destroy men and future war potential; to tire us out and to try still for the stalemate which is the only real hope that Germany's rulers have for the present.

If such an argument is going on today, it must be at the very top. The general staff has plenty to do without engaging in a debate on the long future. The nightmare of a two-front war, which may become a three-front or a four-front war, is with them.

We've been told very little, actually, about the invasion. We're hoping and praying that out of the thunderous confusion of the Normandy peninsula the way will be cleared to eventual victory. But, if Americans are confused, think of the Germans and, yes, even those super brains.

They don't know whether this is the main offensive. They don't know where other offensives will come or how powerful they will be. And that is exactly how our military planners planned it.

This is our time. Let's not throw it away either tomorrow or next year or 10 years from now.

PRESS DEPT.: Shortly before the invasion began, Britain's Ministry of Information was besieged by hundreds of newspaper men seeking credentials to cover the story. For a while the confusion seemed interminable. One disgruntled correspondent finally approached an official and complained of the lack of cooperation. "Don't you realize," the newspaperman ranted, "that this is the most important story since the Crucifixion?" . . . "Yes," replied the British official, calmly, "but remember—only four men covered that."

POLITICS: Josef Beck, Poland's ex-Foreign Minister who died last week, once revealed that Hitler tried to induce him to abandon Poland's pact with the Allies, in return for a large slice of Slovakia . . . "But how can we be sure that Poland will be able to keep Slovakia?" Beck asked him . . . "We can be sure," said Hitler, "because the philosophy of National Socialism will prevail in Europe for more than a thousand years." . . . "Only one philosophy — Christianity — has prevailed here for more than a thousand years," was Beck's final, decisive reply, "and He didn't promise us Slovakia."

SOCIAL NOTS: Jim Farley once met Josef Beck. It was in Warsaw. Farley was the last official guest to be entertained there before the war began . . . Farley asked him: "Just what do you think of Hitler—or is that an indiscreet question?" . . . "The question isn't indiscreet," said Beck, "but the answer would be."

SCHOOL DEPT.: Some children of Stalingrad have been visiting America, touching at our West Coast ports. These children, most of whom were orphaned or separated from their families during the battle of Stalingrad, are working as apprentices on the Russian ships which cross the Pacific to America. They're learning to be sailors, but their academic schooling isn't neglected. On board the ships are school rooms for them. The senior crew members and officers conduct the classes in mathematics, literature, government, etc.

TRAVEL NOTE: When Jackie Coogan was in Calcutta, before taking off on his glider mission against the Japs in Burma, he met Lord Louis Mountbatten . . . "Haven't we met before?" asked Mountbatten . . . Coogan, accustomed as all film actors are to being recognized, couldn't remember having met him . . . "Now I remember," Mountbatten told "The Kid." "It was at Pickfair, in Hollywood, when Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford lived there. But you were too young to remember."

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Connie Mack made the prediction a month ago that every team in the American League would be in first place at some time before this giddy season was finished and Clark Griffith yesterday put in solidly with the 81-year-old boss of the Mackmen. "I'll make another prediction," said Griffith. "Before the season is over, every club in the league will have been in last place."

POVICH

There has never been anything like it, says Griffith, in commenting on the current pennant race. "We've had three and four-team races but this is the first time i my 55 years in baseball that eight clubs are neck and neck with all of them standing a chance to win. The war is the great leveler. It brought all the clubs together."

The best commentary on the closeness of the race is offered up, of course, that as of yesterday morning the last-place club (The Nats) were only four and one-half games out of the league lead. If they had won the second game of Sunday's double-header wit hthe A's and the Browns had not beaten the Indians in the second game of a Sunday twin bill, there would have been a mere three and one-half game span between the first and last place clubs.

It's the kind of a race where a thing like this could and did happen: The A's, who had lost six out of their last seven games, beat the Nats in a double-header and moved to within three and one-half games of the lead.

The fact is that the pennant is going begging in the absence of a good team that could come along and take it all. There isn't a real hot club in the league. Washington's seventh-place team of 1942 would be out in front of this pennant race by a half dozen games, we venture.

Griffith has an idea that the club with the most courage will win the pennant. "They're all on about a par," he says, "and when you have a race like that it's the club that shows the most determination that wins. The pressure is on all of the clubs and the one that can stand it best will finish on top."

His Washington club will do better, Griffith thinks. "We're not hitting with men on basses, but what club is? Our pitching is all right and if we get a couple of players we're dickering for, I think we'll win the pennant. You don't need a long winning streak. You don't have to play .600 ball to win the pennant this year."

All of a sudden the Boston Red Sox have blossomed as one of the better clubs in the league despite their lack of pitching. It's a fact tha tthe Red Sox have more big league ball players than any othr club, even with Joe Cronin playing first base. They have been getting by of late thanks to the relief pitching of old Mike Ryba, and they have a habit of beating the Yankees, particularly.

It was apparent from the start of the season that the Yankees weren't hot despite the fact they've been hovering around the league lead. Joe McCarthy is now operating with players who couldn't bribe their way onto a big league roster in a normal year. Their pitching has been carrying the Yankees, but it's an increasing struggle for McCarthy's few good pitchers.

The hot club in the league at this moment is the White Sox who reeled off eight in a row before they were knocked off the other day. The White Sox are out of character this season. For years, Jimmy Dykes operated with a punchless lineup whose batting averages looked like the time of day between 1 and 2 p. m. but this season the Six are hitting the ball with Thumond Tucker and Rookie Ed Carnett two of the most dangerous sockers in the league.

Cleveland smacks of the Red Sox in that they have more veteran players than most clubs with an infield that is almost intact except for second base. Yet the Indians have been bogging down like every other club. The failure of Allie Reynolds, rookie pitching sensation of last year, hasn't helped the Indians any. Reynolds who is fact, can't go the distance. Besides, the Indians are the slowest club in the league.

The Browns are still on top, but looking none too impressive nevertheless. Their pitching has bogged down atrociously. They are one of the better hitting clubs in the league with probably more reserve strength than any other team, but for the last of pitching they may blow the best pennant chance a Brown team has had since 1922.

Detroit at times has looked like a solid club, with good pitching and catching, but the Tigers' outfield is scarcely pennant-caliber with 39-year-old Roger Cramer the best guy in it. The A's don't look very hot, but they are winning ball games. It adds up to a pennant battle among eight second-division clubs.

N. Y. Skipper Nears Extra Base Record

New York, June 12 (AP).—New York battered a quintet of Brooklyn pitchers for a 15-to-9 victory, poling 16 hits and getting help from the Dodger flingers on nine walks and two hit batsmen.

Mel Ott, manager of the Giants, smacked two home runs and a double, increasing his otal of extra-base blows for his 19 years with the Giants to 1001. Rogers Hornsby holds the National League mark at 1011.

Phil Weintraub, Giant first baseman, also punched out a pair of homers and drove in five runs.

Ralph Branca, out of New York University less than a week, was the best of the Dodger flingers. He whiffed the first three Giants to face him and allowed only two hits in three and two-thirds innings.

Stan Bordagaray and Mickey Owen hit four-masters for the losers, both off the shoots of Winning Pitcher Bill Voiselle.

Martian Scores At Lincoln Fields

Chicago, June 12 (AP).—The Happy Hour Farm's Martian, a 6-year-old, captured today's Lincoln Fiellds feature by an easy four and one-half lengths, leading J. V. Maggio's Whose and J. Greener's Clarksville, the early pace setter, the finish line. The track was sloppy after a downpour between the fourth and fifth races, but 14,800 spectators made Martian a stanch favorite.

In the mutuels, he was $4.60, $3.20 and 2.60, while Whose was $5.60 and $3.80 and Clarksville, 3.60. Time for the mile and 70 yards was 1:46 4-5. Martian was piloted by Jockey J. W. Martin. Daily Trouble was a late scratch and only six horses went postward in the feature.

Indians' 200-Game Winner Thrilled by Comeback

Mel Harder Recalls Being Counted Out As Pitcher in 1941

By Chip Royal

New York, June 12 (AP).—There probably isn't another baseball player around today who has the confidence of Mel Harder, the 34-year-old Cleveland pitcher.

It is one of those attributes born of long action and hard luck. Now the big Czechoslovakian has entered that select circle of 200-game winners in the American League.

"I guess I did all right at that," grins Mel when anyone corners him to ask about his record.

"You know they counted me out in 1941. (The Indians gave him an unconditional release because of arm trouble.)

"But the doc scraped those bone splinters out of my right elbow," continues Mel, "and when I shut out the Browns in my second start of 1942, I got the greatest thrill of my career. I knew then that I was good for a few more years."

Harder has been in organized baseball since 1927, 17 years with the Indians, except for a short spell with New Orleans in 1929.

Idol of Players

A fellow just can't accomplish the great things on the mound like Wimpy (that's his nickname), without commanding the respect and admiration of many players.

To say that Harder is espected would be putting it mildly. He is worshipped.

All during his career Mel has been a player's player. He led the American League in 1933 with an earned-run average of 2.95. He tied for the league leadership in shoutouts in 1934. He is the first Celeveland pitcher since the immortal Cy Young to win more than 200 games for the Tribe.

Mel's best year on the mound since he broke in with Omaha in 1927 was in 1935 when he twirled 22 victories while losing 11. He pitched 13 innings in four All-Star games and is credited with winning one while yielding one unearned run.

During his stay in the majors Harder has sen a lot of ball players and he has a pretty good idea of the best of them.

Names American League Stars

"You'd have to go a long way to pick better southpaws than Lefty Grove and Goofy Gomez," chuckles Mel. "I remember that opening game in the Cleveland Stadium when Grove meat me 1-0 with 80,000 looking on.

"Ted Lyons and Red Ruffing are tops in my book among the right handers I have faced, and I'll split the catching assignment between Mickey Cochrane and Bill Dickey.

"Babe Ruth was going over the hill when I got going out there but I'd like to have him share right field with Ted Williams. They are the sluggers of two eras in my book. For center, I wouldn't want anyone else than Joe DiMaggio, and Al Simmons couldn't be touched in left field.

"Infielders? Well, Lou Gehrig was one guy who could wear me out. How he could pound that ball. He's good enough for me at first, and I'd name Charley Gehringer at second, Joe Cronin at short and Red Rolfe at third."

Mel's greatest disappointment came in 1940 when he lost a crucial end-of-the-season game to Detroit.

"That was the one I would have given a lot to win," moans Wimpy. "But I've enjoyed my baseball experiences and I hope I have a lot more of them. I want to be in there pitching when the boys come home."

Air Travel Predicted for Pro Football

By Whitney Martin

New York, June 12 (AP).—Fred Mandel not only thinks postwar pro football teams will travel by air; he thinks they'll travel in their own plane.

The sponsor of this flighty idea is owner and president of the Detroit Lions of the National League, and until recently he also was publicity director of the CLU. He thought the publicity job was too much on top of his other duties, so he tried to resign.

For seven months he'd walk into his office every day and hand himself his resignation, but he always talked himself out of it until finally the writ of detachment, telling himself how he hated to loose himself from the organization in that way but if he thought he'd be happier without the job, that was all that counted.

Took Seven Months to Quit

Anyway, although it took him seven months to reach that momentous decision, he solved the travel difficulties of the league after the war in two minutes flat, fair time for the half-mile.

"The league will buy one of the Army's big C-47 air transports," he predicted. "It will hire a pilot, a copilot, steward and two maintenance men on a full-time basis and haul the clubs on all the trips. One of those big ships can fly the longest jump in the league in four hours ,and the way our schedule is arranged it will be no trick at all to transport five teams on round trips every weekend."

Mandel, however, left unanswered such questions as what would happen in inclement weather, what would be done with the ship during the long off season and whether they should crate up stout Steve Owen and stow him away in the baggage compartment or take a chance on letting him ride in the passenger quarters.

Idea Feasible

At that, we think Mandel has something in his idea, and that eventually some such plan will be worked out. That is, that the teams will use either an owned or chartered plane to wing back and forth for their games. The double wingback, you might say.

Armstrong Arrives at Crux Of Career a Pathetic Figure

By Oscar Fraley

New York, June 12 (U.P.).—Henry Armstrong was a pathetic little man tonight as he huddled wearily on a rubbing table in Stillman's dingy gymnasium after another of those endless workouts that once again will lead him back into the smoke-shrounded ring at Madison Square Garden.

Henry is broke. And being broke, Henry must fight, despite the denied but ever-present fear of that eventual punch which will batter him into eternal darkness.

"Little Perpetual Motion" tthey called him back in those lusty years when his rippingg fists brought him three titles. He was a bull-shouldered little man with the spring and grace of a tiger. And thtey also dubbed him "Hammering Henry" as he scored a string of 27 straight knockouts. So he reached the crest of the bill—and started down.

Started Comeback in '42

Then came that blistery January night in 1941 when Fritzie Zivic cut L'il Henry to ribbons as Armstrong failed to regain the welterweight title. Manager Eddie Mead ordered Armstrong into retirement and it stuck—until Eddie dropped dead in front of his New York hotel in May, 1942. One month later Henry started a comeback.

"I had my eyes operated on," Henry explained, "and with the long rest they were apparently as good as ever. I had property, but I didn't have any ready cash, so I went back to the ring."

Armstrong fought with mixed success and had 26 fights before he tangled wiith Ray Robinson in the same Garden sing where 2½ years before he had been battered to a helples spulp by Zivic. Robinson repeated the lesson that they never come back, and Henry once again announced his "final" retirement—admitting then that a scar tissue growth inside his left eyeball "resembled a cataract."

"I was awfully disgusted," Armstrong explained tonight. "And besides I had enough money—or I thought I did, u ntil I got done paying taxes and bills."

Faces Davis Hurdle

The upshot was that last December, after a bare four months of "retirement," the grand little battler decided to "give it just one more whirl." He's nearing 32 and that old spring is gone from his legs. But against the type of fighters in action today he has proved a pretty good little man. This trip he had won 11 out of 12, seven by knockouts. He faces one of his most rugged customers in Al (Bummy) Davis, the reformed roughneck, on Thursday night.

"I'll never again announce my retirement," Armstrong mused. "A man never knows what he'll have to do. But I do know this, I can't go on forever, not even four or five more years. I can't say which fight will be my last, it might be this one, or the next, or the next. But when I know I've had enough I'll just fade quietly out of the picture."

The eyes?

"No, I don't mind talking about the eyes. Of course I can't see as good as when I was a young fellow, but I don't think they are in any danger.

But from the way he say it, you know he isn't talking from the heart. He's hoping against hope that the blinding blow won't land before he makes one more stake and "fades quietly out of the picture," able to enjoy it in sunshine and not in darkness.

Brown, Chisox Game Halted By Downpour

Chicago, June 12 (AP).—Rain stopped the Vhicago White Sox and St. Louis Browns after two and one-half innings today, to prolong the Chicago's unusual record of not having had a midweek afternoon ball game since May 19, the Memorial Day holiday games excepted. The teams were tied, 1 to 1.

Their start delayed 35 minutes by one downpour, the clubs got in only a half hour's play, most of it in semi-darkness, before the rain resumed. It was the seventh postponement of the current Sox' home stand.

The Browns scored their only run in the first inning when Shortstop Jim Webb fumbled Vern Stephens' grounder after Al Zarilla and George McQuinn singled. Orval Grove, Sox mound ace, doubled in the second to drive in Webb, who had singled.

All species of bears except the heaviest are able to climb trees.

Giants Purchase Johnny Gee for Waiver Price

Pittsburgh, June 12 (AP).—Johnny Gee, six-foot-nine southpaw pitcher whom the Pittsburgh Pirates acquired in 1940 from Syracuse in the International League for $75,000 in cash and players, today was released by the Bucs to the New York Giants for the waiver price of $7500.

Gee won four and lost four for the Pirates last year. He has pitched in three games—a little over 11 innings—this season and is credited with neither wins nor losses.

Orioles' Blastin' Blas Monaco Gives Big League Scouts Eyeful

Baltimore, June 12 (AP).—Major league scouts are flocking with the Baltimore Orioles these days and with good reason. They are eyeing Blastin' Blas Monaco, flashiest second baseman in the International loop.

But the turnstiles are clicking merrily with Baltimore fans enthusiastically backing the Birds' hopes for their first pennant since the great Jack Dunn, Lefty Grove, et al, 19 years ago. Monaco is their pet and Manager Tommy Thomas isn't hankering for the major prising likely if the speedy Italian were sold now.

Today the Orioles are in second place, just a half-game off the pace of league-leading Jersey City. They chilled Rochester and Buffalo, two main rivals, last week. It was against Buffalo, then topping the league, that Monaco's bat really blasted.

Leadoff Man

As leadoff man, he's proving a second cleanup hitter. Blas is whacking the ball at a .345 clip, having lifted his average 24 points in five battles with Buffalo. All he did was get on base 16 of 25 times, hit .529, including nine safe bingles in 17 official trips. Four of those hits were home runs, one with the bases loaded, and he drove in nine tallies. He is a switch hitter, batting right or left.

Any leadoff man who drives in 32 runs in 44 games is something. As proof of Blas' sharp eye, he has reached base 101 times this season in 188 times to the plate for a .537 average there. Fast afield, he stole 41 bases last year.

Jack Doyle of the Chicago Cubs has been around inquiring, and yesterday Ira Thomas of the Philadelphia Athletics was shopping. Baltimore bought Monaco, a San Antonio, Tex., native, from Cedar Rapids of the Three-Eye League, after the 1942 season. He is 28 now and is 4-F in the draft.

Thomas is beaming and elated over sale prospects, but he scents a pennant and is none too anxious to see Blastin' Blas go. On the other hand, under a working agreement with Cleveland, the Indians can take any two Orioles at the end of the season for $10,000 each. Now Blas would bring a fancy price tag, but the Birds aren't selling—yet.

Baseballer Faces Counterfeit Charge

Hagerstown, June 12 (AP).—Charles Clark, jr., infielder for the Lancaster Baseball Club of the Interstate League, waived a hearing upon arraignment on charges of possessing counterfeit gasoline and sugar ration coupons and was held under $2000 for action of a Federal grand jury, United States Commissioner C. Welles Little announced today.

Little said bond was fixed at $1500 on the charge of possessing counterfeit sugar coupons and 1020 pounds of sugar and $500 on the gasoline coupon charge.

In default of bond, Clark was committed to the Washington County Jail. He was arrested last Friday night at Municipal Stadium.

Pirate Pitcher Classified 4-F

Pittsburgh, June 12 (AP).—Nick Strincevich, Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher, was cassified 4-F by draft board examiners today when he was found to be suffering from gastric ulcers.

A similar ailment was suspected in the case of Pirate outfielder Vince DiMaggio, also examined today, but a definite ruling will not be given until X-ray tests are made.

The players were ordered examined here by their draft boards—Strincevich at Gary, Ind., and DiMaggio at Hermosa Beach, Calif.

Boston's Hugh Duffy Comes to Bat for New England Catchers

By Chip Royal

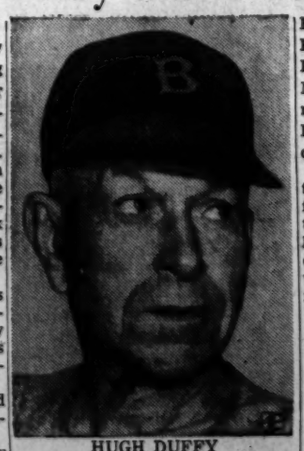

Boston.—Hugh Duffy, that gay old fellow with the all-time batting average of .438, is always good for a baseball yarn—and the more controversial he can make it, the better the ancient youngster likes it.

Hughey, who shies away from all age queries, admits he is "more than 21," and that he started playing baseball in Connecticut back in 1884. Since that time he has seen the best of players come and go.

Any time a sports scribe argues about a hitter, a pitcher, an outfielder, or even a manager, Hughey has his candidate. This time it is catchers—produced by New England.

"You can't beat New England for producing star big-league catchers," challenges Duffy.

"First of all, and before my time, I'll name Connie Mack, a long, lean fellow from Brookfield, Mass. Then Wilbert Robinson of Hudson, Mass., comes to my mind. Uncle Robby was around when I made my big-league debut, and I'll never forget him.

HUGH DUFFY

"Then there were Charley (Duke) Farrell of Marlboro, Marty and Bill Bergen of Brookfield, Jack Ryan of Haverhill, Fred Lake of Boston, Charley Ganzel, Quincy (all Mass.) not to mention Fred Tenney, a left-handed catcher from Brown University, who became quite a first baseman.

"Of course, there'll be a lot of the younger element of baseball followers who will say 'who are these old birds'? But, if they ever had the pleasure of seeing them, or competing against them, they wouldn't have anything but praise for those fellows.

"Then we mustn't forget Bill Carrigan of Lewiston, Me.; Pat Moran of Fitchburg (Mass.); Fred Mitchell, Allston (Mass.); Tommy Madden, Roxbury (Mass.), and Larry McLean, Eddie Ainsmith and Tom Daly, all of Cambridge (Mass.).

"I could go on naming many more of the old timers who were really tops when it came to handling a pitcher," continues Hughey, "and I defy anyone to produce a better catcher than one of the old boys from New England.

"If there are any scoffers, even after that formidable list, how about some of the boys of recent vintage? I'd lead off the list with Mickey Cochrane, the pride of Bridgewater (Mass.), who comes close to being at the head of the class in any day or age.

"Then there was Gabby Hartnett, the Millville (Mass.) mauler, and Shanty Hogan, the Somerville (Mass.) slasher. Large Francis had one of the best throwing arms I've ever seen.

"Not too far down the list would be Cy Perkins of Gloucester (Mass.), another great catcher for Mr. Mack.

"Just before the present war, the Detroit Tigers had a capable receiver in the person of Birdie Tebbetts from Nashua, N. H.

"Yes, sir, when it comes to major league catchers, the rest of the country must take a back seat to New England. You can't beat that bunch."

How about it?

For the United Nations believe that human life is more precious than any other form of wealth—that when it is a choice between a million dollars worth of war machines and the life of one soldier, the civilized choice must be, use up the machines but save the man.

So let us not think of purchasing War Bonds, and more War Bonds, as a burdensome duty. It is the rarest of good fortune that we are able to buy War Bonds to buy machines which will spare our men to enjoy the future for which they fight.

Even as a gift, who wouldn't send his money to war to spare a life! But buying War Bonds is not giving. It is lending to save lives. Lending to the United States Government. Which Two Captures Charles Town Top

S. H. Rogers' Entry Pays $5 to Win

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., June 12. Which Two, owned by S. H. Rogers, jr. of Washington, D. C., led every jump but the first one in the seventh race, the best offering on a revised program here today. Which Two broke second but was soon in front and Jockey Patsy Grant kept him there to defeat Pearson and Shank's High Arch by a length and a half margin. Another length farther back the Winsor Stable's On the Wane to be third in the starting group of six going 1 mile andont,.' C AAA six going 1 1-16 miles.

The Greenbrier Purse, the scheduled feature, was called off when one trainer sought to scratch his horse and Dr. G. T. Strother's Pudie was found ineligible. The fifth race was split to become the fifth and sixth, leaving the seventh the most interesting event of the day.

3500 Watch Program

Which Two in making it two victories in six tries over this track paid a $5 mutuel after High Arch had been backed into slight favoritism in the late wagering. An estimated crowd of 3500 saw the program conducted over a fast track and under brightt skies.

Which Two had to shake off On the Wane to gain a clear lead, ut once in front the 3-year-old son of Whichone made no mistakes. Jockey Frank Sheaffer rated High Arch early, brought the mare to the outside and she closed resolutely but too late to seriously menace the winner. On the Wane was a tiring third.

Jockey Buddy Root made the daily double a personal proposition and the pay-off was $28.20. Rot booted C. E. Funkhouser's oft-disappointing Rolls Rough to victory in the first race at an $8.80 mutuel and then came back to take the second event obard Mrs. J. Goodwin's Bear Cat, which paid a $10.40 mutuel.

BETWEEN RACES . . . One of the veteran jockeys here lost his lower/false teeth while riding a horse here last week and everybody and his cousin has been trying to find them. "I lose my money in one race, then I lose my teeth in another race and I'll bet I get thrown one of these days and the darn teeth bite me," monaed the jockey today. Buddy Root is still far ahead in the jockey standings here. The Kansas City boy who passed up mounts at Delaware Park to stay here, has climbed aboard 151 horses and has won with 50 of them. He also has been second 31 times and third 21 times, having 102 horses in the money. Frank Shaeffer and Apprentice Bobby Edens each has 22 winners but Sheaffer has had only 91 mounts to 103 for his rival. C. P. Sowers and C. A. Cranford, with 12 winners each, are topping the trainers. In all 83 favorites have won in 184 races for a percentage of 45.

By Jimminy Romps Home At Aqueduct

Aqueduct Racetrack, N. Y., June 12 (AP).—G. D. Widener's Lucky Draw, winner of the Peter Pan Handicap and a section of the Wood Memorial, suffered his first defeat in three 1944 starts here today when he trailed Alfred P. Parker's By Jimminy by four lengths in the seven-furlong Gotham Handicap. Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' Stymie, inactive since a poor Preakness effoffrt, lost the place by six lengths.

Lucky Draw, third beaten odds-on choice of the afternoon, closed at 1 to 2. The victor blazed the distance in 1:22 4-5, only two-fifths of a second behind Wait a Bit's track standard, and paid $8.50. Ted Atkinson, riding hero of the day, scored a triple on the Parker colt, which carried 116 pounds to Lucky Draw's top burden of 126. The event drew a quintet of 3-year-olds and was witnessed by 23,722 fans.

R. A. Coward's Doggone, only starter not eligible for the $10,000 Shevlin of next Saturday and the $50,000 Dwyer, to be run the following weekend, finished fourth, and G. Z. Carranza's Seeing Eye, making his first start since winding up the Mexico City meeting as its champion 3-year-old, last.

Lucky Draw was hustled into a half-length advantage by Johnny Longden, with By Jimminy rated close by. They remained that way into the stretch, well clear of the others. Then Atkinson called upon By Jimminy and the brown colt opened up a wide gap with an impressive display of speed. Stymie, last in the early stages, wore down Doggone by nearly two lengths for the show.

Maj. Clark to Address Touchdowners Today

Maj. O. W. Clark, Assistant Administrator of the Veterans Administration in charge of compensation, pensions and vocational rehabilitation, addresses the Touchdown Club's luncheon today at 12:30 p. m.

Major Clark will discuss the retraining of disabled war veterans for work for which they are best suited, and also the manner in which America's wounded veterans already are learning to overcome their handicaps.

Maryland Open Golf Tourney to Be Held June 26

Baltimore, June 12 (AP).—Secretary Emmet Gary of the Maryland State Golf Association announced today that the organization's open golf tournament would be run off in connection with the Middle Atlantic qualifying June 27 for the national professional tourney.

The double event will be held at the Woodholme Country Club in the wake of a pro-amateur affair June 26.

Amon gthose expected to compete, Gary said, is Jimmy Demaret, now stationed at the Bainbridge Naval Training Station.

Orlando Court Action Delayed

Detroit, June 12 (AP).—Action in the case of James Orlando, former Detroit Red Wings hockey player, convicted on a charge of violating the Selective Service Act, was put over for another week in Federal court today when Orlando did not appear.

A sentence of two years' imprisonment recently was upheld by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, but while the appeal was pending Orlando, at liberty under bond, enlisted in the Canadian army.

His attorney told Federal Judge Edward J. Moinet today that he still hoped to have Orlando sent back here by Canadian army authorities.

Women's Bowling Grou Opens Convention

Indianapolis, June 12 (AP).—The Women's International Bowling Congress opened its twenty-seventh annual meeting here today with nearly 500 delegates attending.

Participation of the congress in the war effort is the principal business. There will be no election of officers and no legislation on rules. A goal of $125,000 in war bond sales has been set for the two-day session.

The annual WIBC tournament has been suspended for the duration of the war. The first postwar tournament will be held at Kansas City, which was to have had the 1943 meet.

Francis Trackmen Retain Championship

The colored Francis Junior High School track team amassed 38 points Saturday to retain its track and field title in the annual scholastic meet at Brooks Stadium.

Banneker was second, with 21; Randall, third, 12; Ferrell, fourth, 11; Browne, fifth, 9; Shaw, 8, and Garnet-Patterson failed to place.

Outstanding performer for the winners was Oliver Johnson, who took first place in the high jump and moved his allies from fourth to top place in the relay.

Ace Comes Too Soon

Pocatello, Idaho (AP).—Lynn Varley would have been happier about his hole-in-one if he had made it just a week later. His ace was made on a Sunday preceding the Sunday on which a barrel of merchandise and a complete set of golf equipment were given to the winner of a hole-in-one contest.

Top Cinder Stars Enter American Meet

New York, June 12 (U.P.).—A sterling field of tracy and field stars, including 12 defending champions and teams and individuals from 33 different States was assured tonight for the 56th annual American Track and Field meet here Saturday and Sunday.

Officials of the sponsoring Amateur Athletic Union said the advance list of stars was remarkable in view of wartime manyower conditions which make it impossible for numerous other competitors to defend their laurels.

More than 85 per cent of the big entry list will be provided by the various branches of the armed forces, including men on furlough and teams from Navy and Marine V-12 and V-8 colleges.

Probably the standout individual entrant is California's Cornelius Warmerdam, only man in athletic history to pole vault beyond 15 feet. Warmerdam, competing under the colors of tiny Monmouth, Ill., College, has vaulted 15 feet or higher in 42 official meets.

Other defending champions are Cliff Bourlnad, Finnish 400 meter expert from Washington, D. C., Bill Hulse of the New York Athletic club in the 800 meters, Arky Erwin of Louisiana State in the 400 meter hurdles, Peter Watkins of Fort Sam Houston, Texas, high jump; Earl Audet of California, shot put; Henry Dreyer of New York University, hammer throw; Lieut. Hugh Cannon of New York, discus; Frank Berest of the New York A. C., 56-pound weight throw; Capt. Martin Biles, javelin; James Wilson of New York, 3000 meter walk, and Lieut. Joe McClusky, former Fordham star in the 3000 meter steeple chase.

Yanks' Metheny Signs As Maury Cage Coach

Norfolk, Va., June 12 (AP).—Arthur (Bud) Metheny, outfielder for the New York Yankees, will coach the Maury High School basketball team next season, it was learned today. Metheny has been reappointed to the city school physical education department.

Last winter Metheny served as a physical instructor at Maury High under Bob Bates, athletic director. He first came to Norfolk as a member of the Piedmont League Tars.

Baer May Try Ring Comeback After War

San Antonio (AP).—Smiling Max Baer, something of a jokester about most everything, sends word to Joe Louis that he's going to make a comeack in the ring after the war.

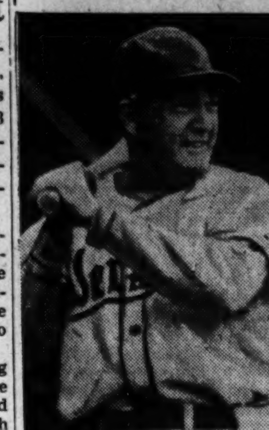

"I'll do the unsuspected again, just as I always did," said Sergeant Max, while on a visit to Kelly Field as part of his tour in behalf of the physical fitness program of the Air Service Command.

"Uncle Sam is training plenty of potential top-flight fighters," he said, predicting that the cycle of postwar champions would be drawn from veterans of the current war.

'If I'd had the AAF training when I was fighting, I'd still have the title," added the former heavyweight king.

Hornsby Found Baseball Different in Old Mexico

ROGERS HORNSBY

By Charles Chamberlain

Chicago, June 12 (AP).—Baseball south of the border is different, to say the least, says Rogers Hornsby.

The Rajah lasted for nine games as manager of the Vera Cruz club in Mexico. He called it quits and returned to the U. S. after a series of incidents which started when he was criticized by the owner of Vera Cruz for slugging a game-winning homer with the bases loaded.

"I gotta laugh when I think of it," chuckles Hornsby. "We were losing 14-13 in the ninth, had the bases filled and two outs. My contract called for an appearance now and then and I also was to get some extra money for hitting. I went to the plate and got hold of one. In that thin air down there it went for a homer and we won 17-14. The peons carried me off the field and threw fruit at the other team. We played three times a week, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday. This was a Saturday game and our second straight win.

Owner Sorry Over Win

"The next morning, Jorge Pasquel, who owns the team, the park and about three million dollars, comes up to me and says: 'Mr. Hornsby, that was a nice hit, but you shouldn't have done it. It would have been better had we lost the game and evened the series. Then today we could get a big Sunday crowd to see the deciding game of the series. You won the series too soon.'

"Well, that's the way their mind percolates down there. Imagine almost having to apologize for hitting a homer. And I didn't get any extra dough for getting it, either!"

Hornsby says they sort of make their own rules as they go along down in Mexico and that the clubs could stand some better organizing.

"There's a chance for a baseball paradise in Mexico," he adds. "Everybody is crazy about the game, and we never had a crowd under 10,000 and we had 'em as high as 30,000."

Silent Pep "Talks"

The Rajah gave pep "talks" to his boys by waving his rams and making odd gestures. He coldn't speak Mexican and only two players on his team—Chico Hernandez, former Chicago Cub catcher, and Tommy Gomez, former Philadelphia Phil infielder—could understand English.

Hornsby says that some of the players got only 6 pesos a day t oeat on (about $1.20).

Peons make up a large part of the attendance at games, says Hornsby, and give vent to their hilarious nature by cute little tricks.. They like to bombard policemen with bananas and roanges. One time 4000 of them surged against the wall inclosing the diamond until it fell down. They walked onto the field free.

"And they had a nice little act when leaving the field," recalls Hornsby. "Sometimes they'd scoop up dirt in papers and toss it into the laps of higher class women sitting in the box seats.

"One day we beat Pueblo, 1-0, and that night some fans burned down our left field stands. Don't ask me why. But you can see baseball is different in Mexico."

Wills Sought As Spar Mate For Latsios

Frankie Wills, the only one of six local fighters to have gone the distance with Henry Armstrong, last night was being sought to assist Corpl. Nick Latsios in his drills for his 10-round bout with the three-time former world's boxing champion at Griffith Stadium a week from Wednesday night, June 21.

Naiman Massey, handler of Latsios, last night said that he would make every effort to have Wills join Corporal Latsios' training camp for this fight, and is convinced that the local Italian-American can go far toward priming Nick for a strong showing.

Whereas Armstrong knocked out Johnny Cabello, Phil Furr, Saverio Turiello, Lew Hanbury and Aaron Perry in that sequence locally, he failed to so much as shake up Wills, and at no time had Frankie off his feet or on the verge of a knockdown.

Latsios, strong and confident and determined to silence critics who refuse to concede him a chance against Armstrong, says he will be set for his best fight against Armstrong.

Reservations will be taken today through Executive 9178, or may be made at the Liberty Athletic Club's gymnasium, 419 9th st. nw.

Capitalites Head Westward For Chicago Convention; Bears Are Still Popular

REPUBLICAN PATTER: "It's going to be a great gathering, and the women are going to be more important in it than ever before," said Ann Wheaton just before she took off to Chicago the other day . . . Director of publicity for the women's division, Republican Natoonal Committee, she's out there well ahead of time to help lay groundwork for the coming convention . . . The roster of well-known women who will attend is exciting enough. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms is already there, staying at the Blackstone . . . Alice Roosevelt Longworth will join her there in a few days . . . Mrs. Robert A. Taft, now in Cincinnati, plans to be in Chicago early next week . . . Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg's Red Cross uniform goes into storage for a brief span only, on June 22. That's the day she and the Senator will head for the convention city. As public relations director for the camp and hospital's council service, she has negotiated a full-time Red Cross job for almost two years . . . Mrs. W. S. Culbertson, new president of the Republican Club here, has arranged for somebody else to attend to the June-time canning at "Charmian," her summer home in Pennsylvania. She'll be in Chicago; and so will Mrs. Thad Brown, stanch Bricker backer; Representative Clare Booth Luce, of course (she's a member of the resolutions committee), and Marian Martin, director of the Republican women's division, who started westward several days ago.

BEAR BAIT: Even with a war going on Washingtonians continue to take time out for one of their favorite pastimes—feeding the bears in Rock Creek's Zoological Park . . . Sundays a flock of visitors, ranging all the way from shavers of 2 to octogenarians, line up before the bear cage and vie with each other in peanut-flinging . . . The bear is an appealing beast; soft, furry, mild-looking, clumsy, and eager to please . . . He straightens his bulky frame and snaps for his peanuts like a trooper, and if a morsel misses the mark he drops to the ground and scoops in the nuts with frugal care . . . Only the polar bears seem to have lost their joy in living, they suffer from the warm climate . . . Their land-lubber brothers have a better time of it; don't seem to mind the bars at all—not, anyway, when the peanuts are pouring through.

"Tell you what," observed an ancient gentleman who had just been feeding the black bears last Sunday afternoon, "there are worse things 'n' plenty o' peanuts. Wartimes like these I wouldn't mind bein' a bear at all."

THISA AND DATA: Dutch Ambassador Alexander Loudon and Senator Maybank were overheard in heated argument at the Ralph Snowden Hill's gala garden party the other afternoon. "I'm sure I'm right," said the envoy . . . "I think I am," firmly murmured Maybank . . . A curious guest drew closer to find out that the Ambassador and the Senator were talking about the time. Loudon's watch said 7:20; Maybank's, 7:15. "I'll trust the United States Senate on everything, except the time," said the Ambassador, with a smile. "I'm sure my watch is right!"

For the first time in its history, G. P. Putnams Sons, publishers, will have its name on the spine of two books from one family this year . . . The authors, who signed their contracts with the company on the same day, are Representative Sol Bloom, whose book, "Our Heritage," has already come out, and his daughter Vera Bloom, whose tome on Washington, the city, is slated for autumn publication.

When Miss Craig McGeachy, former Secretary of the British Embassy and now director of the welfare division of UNRRA, entertains at a 6-to-8 party Monday, June 19, her guest of honor will be Miss Kathleen Halpin, British alternate member on the standing technical committee for the same organization. . . . Miss Halpin arrived here from London last week; expects to stay indefinitely.

MAMMA AND MOMI: It happened at that gala Hawaiian night shindig given by the California State Society. . . . The spotlight was on Momi Kai, hula dancer whose graceful undulations were arousing the envy of the women and the usual huzzahs of admiration from the men. . . One staid couple in the audience appeared unimpressed, slightly disapproving. . . . Momi undulated on. . . . Finally she closed the number and swung out of the spotlight to accompaniment of thunderous applause. . . . The staid couple did not join in, but as the ovation subsided, the man's audible whisper rippled through the crowd. "Momma," he said, nudging his wife, "why don't you show your California hospitality and invite that girl home, to share the spare room?" Momma smiled. "I might, at that," she whispered back. "But if I did, it sure would put you in a jam!"

CHIEF TO CAPITAL: Out at 11 Grafton st., Chevy Chase, there's a siege of seasonal housecleaning going on such as hasn't been noted many times since war began. . . . And for a very special reason: The man of the house is coming home. He's Rear Admiral Harold C. Train, commandant of the Panama Sea Frontier and Fifteenth Naval District since October of last year. He is being sent back to Washington for new assignment, and Mrs. Train and their two married daughters, Mrs. Amos T. Hathaway and Mrs. Davis S. Wilson, are working like mad to get the house in spic-and-span order by the time he gets here. . . . Like all households, theirs has felt the servant-problem pinch, but Mrs. Train has managed to find time to take a Gray Ladies course just the same ("can't let war work slip in times like these," she said). . . . Mrs. Hathaway, whose lieutenant commander husband is on duty in the Pacific, has her hands full looking after their 5-year-old daughter, Joan. . . . Mrs. Wilson's husband, a naval lieutenant, is also in the Pacific area.

Admiral Train is former director of Naval Intelligence. His Panama post has been taken over by Capt. Ellis Stone, former Washington resident and the husband of Grace Zaring Stone, noted author, who wrote under her own name "The Bitter Tea of General Yen" and several other best-sellers, and under the name of Ethel Vance, the sensationally successful novel, "Escape."

Women's Day

President—We will now hear the reports of the committees on obtaining wider recognition for women. Mrs. Schooner will report on women at the peace table.

Mrs. Schooner—I am happy to report that members of my committee called on all the national leaders and were most courteously received. The men couldn't have been nicer. They paid high tribute to American womanhood—

Dr. Nannie B. Hopper—Point of information, please! What did the men promise to do?

Mrs. Schooner—I am just getting to that. The men er-well naturally at this time couldn't be er-too definite. However, many of them, including Senator Calliope and Mr. Tiffany Treacle, assured us that woman's viewpoint would be considered in all the peace negotiations.

Dr. Hopper—Madam President, I object! The men are giving us the run-around!

Mrs. Schooner—Just a moment, please. I have something very wonderful to report—if you will just let me get to it—something that marks a milestone in womanhood's advance. Our appeal so impressed Mr. Treacle that he proposed that a special advisory committee of outstanding women be appointed for the peace conference proceedings! (Applause)

Mrs. Pry—May I inquire just what such a committee would do?

Mrs. Schooner—Well, er—advise, I suppose, or consult, or whatever an advisory committee does. Anyway, both Mr. Treacle and Senator Calliope definitely promised to work for a ladies' advisory committee on world peace. (More applause.)

President—We will now hear Mrs. Maze tell what her committee has done in getting recognition for women in postwar planning.

Mrs. Maze—I am happy to report that we were most graciously received by all the head men in the government. They feel that women are helping materially to win the war on the home front—

Dr. Hopper—Point of information!

Mrs. Maze—Just a minute, please. I was just going to say that we were assured by sources close to the top that special advisory boards of women on postwar conversion and planning were being contemplated. (Applause.)

Mrs. Pry—On just what would we advise?

Mrs. Maze—Well, Mr. Casper Banal, who was particularly gracious to us, feels that women can render a great service, in an advisory capacity of course, on such matters as housing, child care, health, food, and even employment.

Dr. Hopper—I should like to hear just once of some board or committee on which women voted instead of advised.

Mrs. Maze—Well, of course it's just as Senator Mollusk told us—we can't be too radical about these things at this time. All of the gentlemen we saw were most gracious.

President—We will now hear from Mrs. Joyner, chairman of the committee on recognition of women in politics.

Mrs. Joyner—Our committee found the party leaders very courteous and most sympathetic. All of them that we conferred with, including Mr. Sylvester Savvy, Senator Whiffle and Mr. Ezekiel McMoss, told us the parties definitely realize the great power women hold in this year's elections. (Applause). Because of that, both parties plan a striking departure in their traditions. For all important midnight caucuses in smoke-filled hotel rooms there will be women's advisory committees available on the mezzanine floors for consultation. (Applause).

Dr. Hopper—May I inquire if the members of these committees are to be presented with corsages?

President—Ladies, time is fleeting, and we have yet to hear from Mrs. Spellmaster on recognition of women in public office.

Mrs. Spellmaster—Madam President, I have a momentous announcement to make! Some of our leading statesmen, among them Senator Rufus Barnacle and Representative Dartwood Diddle, definitely feel that the time has come when a woman's name should appear on the national party tickets. (Applause.) To that end they will sponsor an amendment to the Constitution providing that the United States have a second vice president—whose duties of course would be purely advisory—and that this second vice president be a WOMAN! (Thunderous applause.)

Greet Unexpected Guest With Tasty 'Shelf' Dishes

Into every home maker's life comes the time when an emergency meal is necessary. It is then she is thankful for canned and packaged foods in the pantry and frozen foods in the refrigerator.

Martha Ellyn

Since these processed foods do come to us with most of the work done, it takes only planning and a little doing to assemble a delicious meal in record time. Let's look at the possibilities of meals of this type.

A can each of vegetable juice, corn, meat, peaches, a package of muffin mix, and a jar of currant jelly from the emergency shelf, and quick-frozen peas and salad greens from the refrigerator will yield the foods necessary to make a meal for the unexpected guest. This could be the menu using these foods:

Dinner Menu

Chilled Vegetable Juice
Casserole of Corn and Meat
Peas Green Salad
Muffins
Peach Meringues Coffee

The average cook knows how to prepare all of the items on the above menu, excepting the peach meringues may not be in her repertoire. The recipe for them is as follows.

PEACH MERINGUE

Drain well, 4 large canned peach halves. Place in a shallow baking dish and fill each center with currant jelly. Beat until stiff 1 egg white. Add gradually, beating thoroughly after each, 2 tablespoons sugar. Fold in desired flavoring. Cover each peach half with the meringue, pressing it out well to the edges to seal in the jelly. If available sprinkle with chopped almonds. Bake in slow oven, 300 degrees for 15 minutes. Serve hot or cold. Serves 4.

The following is a suggestion for another dinner to be prepared from processed foods that may be on the pantry shelf or in the refrigerator:

DELICIOUS MAIN DISH taken from emergency shelft and refrigerator. Yellow kerneled corn topped with slices of canned meat, well seasoned and baked to perfection can be easily pre pared

Dinner Menu

Breaded Corned Beef Slices
Baked Potatoes Green Beans
Cole Slaw
Gingerbread with Apple Sauce
Beverage

Make the Breaded Corned Beef Slices from this recipe: One 12-ounce can of corned beef will serve four persons.

BREAD CORNED BEEF SLICES

Chill corned beef. Open and remove contents whole. Slice in one-fourth inch slices and dip in beaten egg, then in fine dry bread crumbs or corn flakes. Fry slowly in butter, margarine, lard of drippings, until golden brown. Garnish with parsley.

Busy Weekend Is Expected By the Days

The Day family of Chevy Chase has a busy weekend planned.

Saturday night, Mrs. Day, wife of Lieut. Comdr. Bernard P. Day, will make her local theatrical debut as leading lady in Noel Coward's "Hay Fever," a Chevy Chase Players presentation.

She and her husband will be hosts at a supper party following the show. To it they have invited members of the cast and a few out-of-town friends. Sunday will be packing day, for early next week Mrs. Day will leave for Bayshead, N. J., to spend the summer.

Absent for 17 Years

After an absence of 17 years, Mrs. Day, the former Lucinda Steers, is once again making her home in Washington, having come here when her husband was assigned to Navy Department duty. Their permanent Home is Short Hills, N. J.

Long interested in amateur theatricals, Mrs. Day has taken an active part in the formation of the Little Theater group of Chevy Chase. In addition, she serves as a leader in the Girl Scouts and Red Cross chairman for Dorothy Hancock Chapter, DAR.

Brother With Them

The Day household includes two daughters, Linda and Joanne, who have just completed their first year at Warrenton Country School; a younger daughter, Thyrza, student at Chevy Chase Elementary School, and Commander Day's brother, Capt. Joseph P. Day, Boston.

Crying Baby Has Reasons—Find Them

By Myrtle Meyers Eldred

It isn't unusual for this column to receive letters from fathers. But a grandfather is a rarity. This note has lots of good ideas so I'll let grandfather-of-four speak for himself.

"This week," he writes, "my daughter put her 7-month-old baby in a jumper after her nap and meal at 6 p. m. I told her I thought this would make the baby excited and restless, but my daughter said the exercise was necessary.

"My wife and I went out and when we came home very late my daughter was at her wit's end because the baby wouldn't go to sleep. The next night she left me with the child, who was put in her crib at 6 p. m. and never woke until 6 a. m. My daughter admits I won my point.

Must Have Quiet at Bedtime

"Another thing, she tries to put the baby to sleep before it is fed. I argue the baby should be fed first."

I agree that any healthy baby given plenty of freedom in crib or on the floor or in playpen, gets all the exercise it needs without the use of any artificial apparatus. Just as grownups get too tired and exhilarated to sleep, so babies need quiet and relaxation at bedtime in order to put them in the mood to "let down" and submit to sleep.

John R. Fagan, president of the Silver Spring Board of Trade, which will be host to the other groups, said the entire amount is expected to be raised at the session tonight.

Honor guests will be Representatives J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), Frank Fellows (R., Me.) and Chauncey M. Reed (R., Ill.).

Largest contribution was $3500 from a convert, whose name has been withheld by request. The St. Michael's Men's Club gave $1000, the Sodality $750 and the Holy Name Society $100. Single Contest Marks Voting In Alexandria

Alexandria Bureau of The Post. 110 North St. Asaph St. TE. 6538.

With an election contest pending in only one of Alexandria's six wards in the City Council race today, political observers last night looked for only a token vote in the five wards, where the Democratic candidates are unopposed.

The possibility of write-in candidates gaining sway over the electorate was considered unlikely. The polls will open at 5:41 a. m. and close at 8:34 p. m. In the Second Ward Councilman Paul Lyne Delaney, who is completing his third consecutive term, is opposed by an independent, Aubra N. Shuman, head of Shuman's Bakery & Ice Cream Co. since 1919. It is the only contest.

Judges and clerks who will serve in the general election today have been listed by James N. Colasanto, secretary of the Alexandria Electoral Board, as follows:
